Adolescents and risk Silvia Bonino, Elena Cattellino, Silvia Ciairano, 2006-01-16 Over the past several decades the field of adolescent health and development has undergone a profound and pervasive transformation in the knowledge and understanding of young lives. Popular myths about adolescents that they are hapless victims of raging hormones or risk takers who see themselves as invulnerable have been laid to rest. But even more important has been the emergence of a new scientific perspective about this stage of life. It is a perspective that recognizes that adolescents are active participants in the shaping of their own development, that the influence of context—family, peers, school, media, neighborhood, workplace—is as important in determining the life course as are the attributes of the individual, and indeed that it is the interaction between context and individual attributes that is really crucial. That there is remarkable diversity in the pathways that can be taken by youth as they traverse between late childhood and young adulthood and that the adolescent life stage is itself an extended one—a full decade of the life trajectory with very different tasks, opportunities, and challenges in the later years than in the earlier years. It is this new scientific perspective that so thoroughly informs the present volume by Silvia Bonino, Elena Cattellino, and Silvia Ciairano. The volume is an impressive contribution to understanding risk behavior among contemporary Italian adolescents, but it goes far beyond that to advance understanding of adolescent behavior and development as a whole.

accommodate them through global cooperation must become a top priority in educating deaf learners Through the participation of an international interdisciplinary set of scholars Educating Deaf Learners takes a broader view of learning and academic achievement than any previous work considering the whole child In adopting this broad perspective the authors capture the complexities and commonalities in the social emotional cognitive and linguistic mosaic of which the deaf child is a part It is only through such a holistic consideration that we can understand their academic potential
