Modeling, case studies, and optimization methods for building energy systems

Lorenzo Cremaschi¹

Abstract: Modeling, case studies, and optimization methods for building energy systems The current issue of the Science and Technology for the Built Environment presents 10 articles that cover a wide range of topics: From measuring heat gain values of office equipment to modeling phase change materials for building energy performance, from formulating optimization methods of HVAC systems to developing controls strategies for variable refrigerant flow systems. In this editorial article, I would like to introduce these 10... Show more
