

Setting the scene

- The relatives of a 75-year-old war veteran noticed that he seemed to be more forgetful and less able to handle routine tasks than before. He was referred to a clinical neuropsychologist to determine if he was suffering from dementia.
- The disability officer of a university referred a first-year university student who had failed a number of courses to a neuropsychology clinic to find out if she had a learning disability.
- A 10-year-old boy was diagnosed with a brain tumour. After surgery and radiation therapy, he was referred to a clinical neuropsychologist to evaluate the effect of the tumour and treatment on his cognitive functions.
- A young woman was involved in a car accident six months ago. She was referred by a rehabilitation specialist for a neuropsychological assessment to determine whether her cognitive processes were affected by the injury; and, if so, which one and to what extent, and whether or not she could return to her job.

Introduction

In the twenty-first century, it is well known that the human brain is responsible for producing, controlling and mediating our behaviour (Box 11.1 provides a brief description of the structures and functions of the human brain). Damage to the brain caused by external or internal factors, as illustrated by the above examples, can lead to significant changes in functions such as sensation, attention, memory, problem solving, planning, language, visuo-spatial processing and movement—and, as a consequence, to problems in living. The branch of psychology that specialises in the assessment and treatment of brain injury is clinical neuropsychology. In this chapter, we provide an introduction to neuropsychological testing and assessment by addressing the following questions: What is clinical neuropsychology? When and how did clinical neuropsychology develop as a speciality area of psychology? What is neuropsychological assessment? What are the purposes and procedures of neuropsychological assessment? What are the commonly used neuropsychological tests?
