

Fundamentals of Nursing Concepts, Process, and Practice Kozier & Erb's | 9th Edition

Nursing Process

- A theory of how nurses organize the care of individuals, families and communities proposed by Yura and Walsh in 1967.
- It originally started with the four-part process of Assessment, Planning, Implementation and Evaluation.
- Currently, nursing process provides the framework in which nurses use their knowledge and skills to express human caring and to help clients meet their health needs.

Characteristics of the Nursing Process:

1. It is systematic.
2. It is cyclic and dynamic rather than static.
3. It is client-centered- nurse organizes plan of care according to client problems rather than nursing goals.
4. It is interpersonal and collaborative- depends on open and meaningful communications between the client and the nurse.
5. It is goal-oriented.
6. It is universally applicable- can be used with clients of any age at any point of the wellness-illness continuum; useful in a variety of settings.
7. It is an adaptation of problem-solving techniques and systems theory- based on the scientific method.
8. It can be viewed as parallel to but separate from the medical process.

Four Core Competencies Essential to Nursing Practice

1. Cognitive Competencies

-enable nurses to reason and offer a scientific rationale for each element in a client's plan of care; select interventions that are most likely to yield outcome and use critical- thinking to solve problems

2. Technical Competencies

-involve everything from manual dexterity and good hand-eye coordination to an ability to troubleshoot when equipment malfunctions; enables nurses to manipulate equipment skillfully; psychomotor skills.

3. Interpersonal Competencies

-enable nurses to establish and maintain caring relationships that facilitate the achievement or valued goals while simultaneously affirming the worth of the participants in the relationship; includes communication skills.

4. Ethical/legal Competencies

-enable nurses to conduct themselves in a manner that is consistent with their personal moral code and professional role responsibilities; includes accountability and patient advocacy.
