Taking Risks Literary Journalism From The Edge:

Taking Risks Barbara Moon, Don Obe, 1998 Each summer The Banff Centre's Literary Journalism program takes in eight senior journalists and writers and charges them with a simple if daunting task Write about something you really care about In this installment of the Banff Centre Press's literary journalism series participants push boundaries and arrive at some of their most passionate work Taking Risks collects the work of twelve accomplished journalists on a range of subjects as diverse as their voices the curious nature of the celebrity interview writers borrowing material from other writers the extinction of Aboriginal languages a jazz musician's troubled life Offering unique insights the writers take risks with style and substance laying themselves on the line with an intimacy seldom seen in contemporary journalism The Prodigal Tongue Mark Abley, 2011-04-20 The Prodigal Tongue takes a look at the wild wacky and sometimes baffling road our language English and others is taking in its evolution Where in the world will it end up Mark Abley author of Spoken Here has created an entertaining and informative exploration of the way that languages English Japanese French Arabic and other major tongues are likely to transform and be transformed by their speakers during the twenty first century Grammar and vocabulary are just the beginning more importantly this book is about people In places like Los Angeles Tokyo Singapore and Oxford Abley encounters hip hop performers and dictionary makers bloggers and translators novelists and therapists He talks to a married couple who were passionately corresponding online before they met in meatspace And he listens to teenagers puzzling out the words they coin in chatrooms and virtual worlds Everywhere he goes he asks what the future is likely to hold for the ways we communicate Abley balances a traditional concern for honesty and accuracy in language with an untraditional delight in newly minted expressions Lively evocative passionate and playful this is a book for everyone who cherishes the words we use Spoken Here Mark Abley, 2011-04-13 Whether on the other side of the world or in our own backyard languages everywhere are fading into oblivion Mark Abley explores what the human family stands to lose and explains why some endangered languages continue to thrive Within the next couple of generations most of the world's 6000 languages will vanish due mainly to the unstoppable tide of English With an open mind and a well worn passport award winning journalist and poet Mark Abley tells entertaining and vital stories about why languages matter From Oklahoma to Provence aboriginal Australia to Baffin Island the cultures are radically different but the problems of shrinking linguistic and cultural richness are painfully similar Abley's investigation provides a stunning glimpse of the beauty and intricacies of languages like Yiddish and Yuchi Mohawk and Manx Inuktitut and Provençal More importantly it offers a sympathetic and memorable portrait of the people who still speak languages under threat When a language dies out gone too are stories that have been told for centuries unique ways of seeing the world and perhaps even ways of solving problems both large and small Abley believes we must see languages as abundant sources of richness wonder and usefulness And he shows that hope still exists that the determination of even one person can revive a whole language and its culture in the process creating

Lerner,2024-12-30 Bringing together ten chapters by some of the most important scholars of literary journalism around the world this book covers a range of topics that are key to understanding the role of literary journalism as both a practice and a topic of academic study Beginning with an introduction that situates literary journalism in its historical context the chapters go on to address the basic definitional problem of literary journalism the rhetorical strategies of literary journalists the negotiated roles of subjects and storytellers gender geography the role of literary journalism in fostering the public imagination and the role of literary journalism in education The chapters draw on contemporary and relatable case studies which help readers link broader themes with their practical applications This volume concludes with an Afterword by Bill Reynolds editor of Literary Journalism Studies which reflects on the preceding chapters and critically on the direction in which the field is heading in the near future Insights on Literary Journalism is highly recommended reading for advanced scholars and researchers of Literary Journalism as well as Literature and Media History Risk in Children's Adventure Literature Elly McCausland,2024-05-31 Risk in Children s Adventure Literature examines the way in which adults discuss the reading and entertainment habits of children and with it the assumption that adventure is a timeless and stable constant whose meaning and value is self evident A closer enquiry into British and American adventure texts for children over the past 150 years reveals a host of complexities occluded by the term and the ways in which adults invoke adventure as a means of attempting to get to grips with the nebulous figure of the child Writing about adventure also necessitates writing about risk and this book argues that adults have historically used adventure to conceptualise the relationship between children and risk the risks children themselves pose to society the risks that threaten their development and how they can be trained to manage risk in socially normative and desirable ways Tracing this tendency back to its development and consolidation in Victorian imperial romance and forward through various adventure texts and media to the present day this book probes and investigates the truisms and assumptions that underlie our generalisations about children's love for adventure and how they have evolved since the mid nineteenth century

Telling Stories, Taking Risks Alice M. Klement, Carolyn B. Matalene, 1998 Telling Stories Taking Risks includes many uncut stories from national regional and local newspapers both mainstream and alternative as well as from national magazines such as Esquire and Sports Illustrated short biographies of each writer and explanations of how their stories evolved and discussions of objectivity and subjectivity accuracy and honesty reporting strategies and writing processes
