Brinner,2002-11-01 These 11th century tales written in many different languages and well known throughout the Muslim world have been read and studied through the years This is however the first complete translation of the Arabic text into English from the story of the creation of the world to the time just before the coming of the Prophet Muhammad and the revelation of Islam It includes tales of prophets who are Biblical figures but also of others not considered prophets in other traditions and contains tales too like The Thousand and One Nights with no prophetic content In the Islamic world this work has been and is still read and enjoyed both as a source of religious study and for simple pleasure *The Ocean of Story, Being C. Westerman and Angela Brazil to more recent tales by Michael Morpurgo and Pat Mills Budgen traces developments of understanding and raises important questions about the presentation of history to the young He considers such issues as the motivations of children's authors and whether modern children's books about the past are necessarily more accurate than those written by their forebears Why for example do modern writers tend to ignore the global aspects of the First World War Did detailed narratives of battles written during the war really convey the truth of the conflict Most importantly he considers whether works aimed at children can ever achieve anything more than a partial and skewed response to such complex and tumultuous events
