Environment and Industry in Developing Countries Ralph Andrew Luken, Frank Van Rompaey, 2007-01-01 This impressive study compares the adoption of environmentally sound technology in industrial sectors in eight developing countries. In combining a variety of quantitative and qualitative methodologies on rich empirical data, the authors open the technological change black box and are able to formulate clear conclusions on the drivers and barriers for technological change. A major contribution to better understanding and governing environmentally sound technological change. Arthur P J Mol Wageningen University, The Netherlands. All theory is gray but the golden tree of life springs ever green, says Goethe. This book is very green, that is empirical about a green topic: the adoption of environmentally sound technologies in developing countries using triangulation for assessing the factors behind such choices. A very nice study on an important topic. Ren Kemp, UNU-MERIT, Maastricht, The Netherlands. Industries located in developing countries have made major improvements in environmental performance since the Rio Earth Summit of 1992. More specifically, their record in reducing energy use and water pollutant intensities has been better than developed countries. This significant new book investigates what motivates industries in developing countries to adopt environmentally sound technology (EST), a subject about which very little is actually known. The authors present the findings of a United Nations study of the factors that determined EST adoption by 105 manufacturing plants in four different sectors within eight developing countries. They explore both factors internal to the plants as well as external factors including governments, markets, and civil society. Environment and Industry in Developing Countries will be of great interest to development assistance agencies supporting programmes for industrial environmental management in developing countries and also to graduate school programmes in economic development, technology management, as well as in international business. MAKING SCIENCE, INNOVATION AND RESEARCH WORK FOR THE SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS. Prof. Allam Ahmed, 2019-06-17. The theme of the Outlook 2019 is to strengthen the role of science, innovation, and research uptake in service of the 2030 Agenda for SD. The volume will therefore critically examine the important role of science, innovation, and research for the achievement of the 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) of the 2030 Agenda and to provoke forward thinking on the role of science, innovation, and research in solving global problems related to sustainability. Information and Communication Technologies in the Context of Globalization. K. Lal, 2007-11-13. This book focuses on the adoption of new technologies led by information and communication technologies by SMEs in developing countries. It identifies several factors that augment competitiveness of firms in the era of globalization. Contrary to the general belief, these factors are not uniform across the developing world. Based on the empirical evidence from firms located in Malaysia, India, Nigeria, Jamaica, and Costa Rica, the study concludes that firms cannot remain competitive without institutional support. Since firms operate in different institutional and economic environments, the form of support varies from one country to another. Emerging Africa. Steven C. Radelet, 2010. Since 1995, 17 African countries have defied expectations and have launched a remarkable if little noticed turnaround. Emerging Africa describes this revitalization and why it is likely to continue. Housing and Technology.
