behind the creation and development of the show and season by season critiques of each episode through the entire 1999 season She's Mad Real Oneka LaBennett, 2011-07-25 Overwhelmingly Black teenage girls are negatively represented in national and global popular discourses either as being at risk for teenage pregnancy obesity or sexually transmitted diseases or as helpless victims of inner city poverty and violence Such popular representations are pervasive and often portray Black adolescents consumer and leisure culture as corruptive uncivilized and pathological In She's Mad Real Oneka LaBennett draws on over a decade of researching teenage West Indian girls in the Flatbush and Crown Heights sections of Brooklyn to argue that Black youth are in fact strategic consumers of popular culture and through this consumption they assert far more agency in defining race ethnicity and gender than academic and popular discourses tend to acknowledge Importantly LaBennett also studies West Indian girls consumer and leisure culture within public spaces in order to analyze how teens like China are marginalized and policed as they attempt to carve out places for themselves within New York's contested terrains
