Scandalous Bodies Smaro Kamboureli,2009-05-05 Scandalous Bodies is an impassioned scholarly study both of literature by diasporic writers and of the contexts within which it is produced It explores topics ranging from the Canadian government's multiculturalism policy to media representations of so called minority groups from the relationship between realist fiction and history to postmodern constructions of ethnicity from the multicultural theory of the philosopher Charles Taylor to the cultural responsibilities of diasporic critics such as Kamboureli herself Smaro Kamboureli proposes no neat or comforting solutions to the problems she addresses Rather than adhere to a single method of reading or make her argument follow a systematic approach she lets the texts and the socio cultural contexts she examines give shape to her reading In fact methodological issues and the need to revisit them become a leitmotif in the book Theoretically rigorous and historically situated this study also engages with close reading not the kind that views a text as a sovereign world but one that opens the text in order to reveal the method of its making Her practice of what she calls negative pedagogy a self reflexive method of learning and unlearning of decoding the means through which knowledge is produced allows her to avoid the pitfalls of constructing a narrative of progress Her critique of Canadian multiculturalism as a policy that advocates what she calls sedative politics and of the epistemologies of ethnicity that have shaped for example the first wave of ethnic anthologies in Canada are the backdrop against which she examines the various discourses that inform the diasporic experience in Canada

Scandalous Bodies was first published in 2000 and received the Gabrielle Roy Prize for Canadian Criticism

Basements and Attics, Closets and Cyberspace Linda M Morra, Jessica Schagerl, 2013-01-24 Women's letters and memoirs were until recently considered to have little historical significance Many of these materials have disappeared or remain unarchived often dismissed as ephemera and relegated to basements attics closets and increasingly cyberspace rather than public institutions This collection showcases the range of critical debates that animate thinking about women's archives in Canada The essays in Basements and Attics Closets and Cyberspace consider a series of central questions What are the challenges that affect archival work about women in Canada today What are some of the ethical dilemmas that arise over the course of archival research How do researchers read and make sense of the materials available to them How does one approach the shifting unstable forms of new technologies What principles inform the decisions not only to research the lives of women but to create archival deposits The contributors focus on how a supple research process might allow for greater engagement with unique archival forms and critical absences in narratives of past and present From questions of acquisition deposition and preservation to challenges related to the interpretation of material the contributors track at various stages how fonds are created or sidestepped in response to national and other imperatives and to feminist commitments how archival material is organized restricted accessed and interpreted how alternative and immediate archives might be conceived and approached and how exchanges might be read when there are peculiar lacunae missing or fragmented documents or gaps in communication that then require imaginative leaps on the part of the researcher

Contemporary American Indian Literatures and the Oral Tradition Susan Berry Brill de Ramírez, 1999-07-01 Because American Indian literatures are largely informed by their respective oral storytelling traditions they may be more difficult to understand or interpret than the more text based literatures with which most readers are familiar In this insightful new book Susan Berry Brill de Ram rez addresses the limitations of contemporary criticism and theory in opening up the worlds of story within American Indian literatures proposing instead a conversive approach for reading and understanding these works In order to fully understand American Indian literatures Brill de Ram rez explains that the reader must become a listener reader an active participant in the written stories To demonstrate this point she explores literary works both by established Native writers such as Sherman Alexie N Scott Momaday Leslie Marmon Silko and Luci Tapahonso and by less well known writers such as Anna Lee Walters Della Frank Lee Maracle and Louis Owens Through her literary engagements with many poems novels and short stories she demonstrates a new way to read and understand the diverse body of American Indian literatures Brill de Ram rez s conversive approach interweaves two interconnected processes co creating the stories by participating in them as listener readers and recognizing orally informed elements in the stories such as verbal minimalism and episodic narrative structures Because this methodology is rooted in American Indian oral storytelling traditions Native voices from these literary works are able to more directly inform the scholarly process than is the case in more textually based critical strategies Through this innovative approach Brill de Ram rez shows that literature is not a static text but an interactive and potentially transforming conversation between listener readers storyteller writers and the story characters as well Her book furthers the discussion of how to read American Indian and other orally informed literatures with greater sensitivity to their respective cultural traditions and shows that the immediacy of the relationship between teller story and listener can also be experienced in the relationships between writers literary works and their listener readers American women have long dealt with charges of betrayal within and beyond their communities. Images of their disloyalty pervade American culture from the daughter who is branded a traitor to family for adopting American ways to the war bride who immigrates in defiance of her countrymen to a figure such as Yoko Ono accused of breaking up the Beatles with her seduction of John Lennon. Leslie Bow here explores how representations of females transgressing the social order play out in literature by Asian American women. Questions of ethnic belonging, sexuality, identification and political allegiance are among the issues raised by such writers as Jeanne Wakatsuki Houston, Bharati Mukherjee, Jade Snow Wong, Amy Tan, Sky Lee, Le Ly Hayslip, Wendy Law Yone, Fiona Cheong and Nellie Wong. Beginning with the notion that feminist and Asian American identity are mutually exclusive, Bow analyzes how women serve as boundary markers between ethnic or national collectives in order to reveal the male based nature of social cohesion. In exploring the relationship between femininity and citizenship, liberal feminism and American racial discourse and women's domestic abuse and human rights, the author suggests that Asian American women not only mediate sexuality's construction as a determiner of loyalty but also manipulate that construction as a tool of political persuasion in their writing. The language of betrayal, she argues, offers a potent rhetorical means of signaling how belonging is policed by individuals and by the state. Bow's bold analysis exposes the stakes behind maintaining ethnic, feminist and national alliances, particularly for women who claim multiple loyalties.

Telling it Telling It Book Collective (Vancouver, B.C.), 1990. A thought provoking collection of dialogue, reflective commentary and creative writing by prominent Native Asian Canadian and lesbian writers.

A History of Canadian Literature William H. New, William Herbert New, 2003. New offers an unconventionally structured overview of Canadian literature from Native American mythologies to contemporary texts. Publishers Weekly. A History of Canadian Literature looks at the work of writers and the social and cultural contexts that helped shape their preoccupations and direct their choice of literary form. W. H. New explains how from early records of oral tales to the writing strategies of the early twenty first century, writer, reader, literature and society are interrelated. New discusses both Aboriginal and European mythologies, looking at pre-Contact narratives and also at the way Contact experience altered hierarchies of literary value. He then considers representations of the real, whether in documentary, fantasy or satire, historical romance and the social construction of Nature and State and ironic subversions of power, the politics of cultural form and the relevance of the media to a representation of community, standard and individual voice. New suggests some ways in which writers of the later twentieth century codified such issues as history, gender, ethnicity and literary technique itself. In this second edition, he adds a lengthy chapter that considers how writers at the turn of the twenty first century have reimagined their society and their roles within it and an expanded chronology and bibliography. Some of these writers have spoken from and about various social margins, dealing with issues of race, status, ethnicity and sexuality; some have sought emotional understanding through strategies of history and memory; some have addressed environmental concerns and some have reconstructed the world by writing across genres and across different media All genres are represented with examples chosen primarily but not exclusively from anglophone and francophone texts A chronology plates and a series of tables supplement the commentary Writing in Our Time Pauline Butling, Susan Rudy, 2006-01-01 Process poetics is about radical poetry poetry that challenges dominant world views values and aesthetic practices with its use of unconventional punctuation interrupted syntax variable subject positions repetition fragmentation and disjunction To trace the aesthetically and politically radical poetries in English Canada since the 1960s Pauline Butling and Susan Rudy begin with the upstart poets published in Vancouver's TISH A Poetry Newsletter and follow the trajectory of process poetics in its national and international manifestations through the 1980s and 90s The poetics explored include the works of Nicole Brossard Daphne Marlatt bpNichol George Bowering Roy Kiyooka and Frank Davey in the 1960s and 70s For the 1980 2000 period the authors include essays on Jeff Derksen Clare Harris Erin Mour and Lisa Robertson They also look at books by older authors published after 1979 including Robin Blaser Robert Kroetsch and Fred Wah A historiography of the radical poets and a roster of the little magazines small press publishers literary festivals and other such sites that have sustained poetic experimentation provide context Tricks with a Glass Rocío G.
