Speech And Situation A Psychological Conception Of Situated Speaking:

Speech and Situation T. Herrmann, 2012-12-06 The major portion of the investigations described in the present volume would never have been undertaken without the generous support of the Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft German Research Society During my professorship at the University of Marburg I could not have carried on with my work in the psychology of language had it not been for the aid offered by this institution Since these experimental investigations constitute the empirical backbone of the entire argument I feel especially indebted to the Society My warm thanks are also extended to the over two thousand subjects whose willing cooperation enabled my associates and myself to collect the body of data reported in these pages I would like to thank the many parents teachers and school principals whose good will and collaboration were the prerequisites for conducting many of our experiments The book also incorporates valuable contributions by my associates insofar as my ideas and arguments bear the imprint of our joint work and discussion to an extent that makes an accurate acknowledgement of each inspiration next to impossible Giving them due credit I would like to thank my assistants the graduating students and the student aides back in Marburg and more recently in Mannheim

Cognition and Sentence Production S.N. Sridhar, 2012-12-06 The developments in linguistic theory over the last three decades have given us a better understanding of the formal properties of language However as the truism goes language does not exist in a vacuum It interacts with a cognitive system that involves much more than language and functions as the primary instrument of human communication A theory of language must therefore be based on an integration of its formal properties with its cognitive and communicative dimensions The present work is offered as the modest contribution to this research paradigm This book is a revised and slightly enlarged version of my doctoral thesis submitted to the University of Illinois at Urbana Champaign In writing the original version I had the privilege of working with Professor Charles E Osgood who is widely recognized as the founder and one of the leading figures of modern psycholinguistics I have benefited from extensive and stimulating discussions with him not only on this topic but in the development of his theory of language performance in general see his Lectures on Language Performance 1980 in this series However the responsibility for the particular formulations of the theory hypotheses in interpretations and conclusions found in this work which have been in was dominated by the study of mediated and unmediated message effects during which considerable research focused on the attitudinal and action consequences of exposure to messages. A more catholic purview of the communication process exists today. This more encompassing perspective does not deny the importance of studying message effects but raises the additional question of how individuals generate messages in the first place. While the earlier era of communication research was dominated by studies that focused on attitude and behavior change as primary dependent variables, such variables as message comprehension have begun to emerge in this new era. The focus on communication and cognition has led paradoxically to a more intense focus on social interaction processes. The theory and research presented in this volume seeks to strike a balance between the internal workings of the individual cognitive system on the one hand and the outer world of social interaction on the other. Whether or not the theory and research stands the test of time, it is clear that complete cognitive accounts of social interaction cannot confine themselves to mere descriptions of the cognitive structures and processes that are responsible for message production and comprehension. Explicit links must be made between these cognitive structures and processes and the workings of social interaction. This work takes a modest step in that direction.

All Bullshit and Lies? Chris Heffer, 2020. In a postfactual world in which claims are often held to be true only to the extent that they confirm pre-existing or partisan beliefs, this book asks crucial questions: how can we identify the many forms of untruthfulness in discourse? How can we know when their use is ethically wrong? How can we judge untruthfulness in the messiness of situated discourse? Drawing on pragmatics, philosophy, psychology, and law, All Bullshit and Lies develops a comprehensive framework for analyzing untruthful discourse in situated context. TRUST or Trust-related Untruthfulness in Situated Text sees untruthfulness as encompassing not only deliberate manipulations of what is believed to be true, the insincerity of withholding, misleading, and lying, but also the distortions that arise from an irresponsible attitude towards the truth, dogma distortion, and bullshit. Chris Heffer discusses times when truth is not in play, as in jokes or fiction, as well as instances when concealing the truth can achieve a greater good. The TRUST framework demonstrates that untruthfulness becomes unethical in discourse though when it unjustifiably breaches the trust an interlocutor invests in the speaker. In addition to the theoretical framework, this book provides a clear practical heuristic for analyzing discursive untruthfulness and applies it to such cases of public discourse as the Brexit battle, Trump's tweet about voter fraud, Blair and Bush's claims about weapons of mass destruction, and the multiple forms of untruthfulness associated with the Skripal poisoning case. In All Bullshit and Lies, Chris Heffer turns a critical eye to fundamental questions of truthfulness and trust in our society. This timely and interdisciplinary investigation of discourse provides readers a deeper theoretical understanding of untruthfulness in a postfactual world.
