Technology Society In Ming China:

Technology and Society in Ming China, 1368-1644 Francesca Bray, 2000 Historians of Chinese technology have tended to pay little attention to the Ming dynasty characterizing it as a stagnant period unmarked by significant inventions of the kind that in Europe gave rise to the industrial revolution and the modern world Yet the Ming was a period of extraordinary social cultural and economic vitality and change and it would be curious if technology had played no part in these changes This pamphlet approaches the material world of the Ming from a more anthropological perspective than has been conventional among historians of China emphasizing the role of technologies in social order and identity Sugar and

Society in China Sucheta Mazumdar, 1998 In this study Sucheta Mazumdar offers an answer to the fundamental question of why China universally acknowledged as one of the most developed economies in the world throughout the mid 18th century paused in this development process in the 19th century Focusing on cane sugar production domestic and international trade technology and the history of consumption for over 1000 years as a means of framing the larger questions the author shows that the economy of late imperial China was not stagnant nor was the state suppressing trade indeed China was integrated into the world market well before the Opium War However the trajectory of development did not transform the social organization of production or set in motion sustained economic growth Technology in World Civilization, revised and expanded edition Arnold Pacey, Francesca Bray, 2021-08-03 The new edition of a milestone work on the global history of technology This milestone history of technology first published in 1990 and now revised and expanded in light of recent research broke new ground by taking a global view avoiding the conventional Eurocentric perspective and placing the development of technology squarely in the context of a world civilization Case studies include technological dialogues between China and West Asia in the eleventh century medieval African states and the Islamic world and the United States and Japan post 1950 It examines railway empires through the examples of Russia and Japan and explores current synergies of innovation in energy supply and smartphone technology through African cases The book uses the term technological dialogue to challenges the top down concept of technology transfer showing instead that technologies are typically modified to fit local needs and conditions often triggering further innovation The authors trace these encounters and exchanges over a thousand years examining changes in such technologies as agriculture firearms printing electricity and railroads A new chapter brings the narrative into the twenty first century discussing technological developments including petrochemicals aerospace and digitalization from often unexpected global viewpoints and asking what new kind of industrial revolution is needed to meet the challenges of the Anthropocene History Of Mathematical Sciences: Portugal And East Asia V - Visual

The Military Revolution in Early Modern Europe Frank

Jacob, Gilmar Visoni-Alonzo, 2016-06-25 This book challenges the premise that a military revolution prompted the major European powers to enter into an era of global hegemony during the early modern period and suggests that this theory is not supported if we closely examine contemporary historical events. The conquests of Mexico and Peru arguably the two most important colonial acquisitions by a European power during that era were accomplished without the technology or tactics that are usually associated with the military revolution. On the other hand, Japan, Korea, some Indian states, and the Ottoman Empire implemented military reforms both tactical and technological that are commonly associated with what was considered an exclusively Western approach to warfare. By comparing case studies of the Western and the non-Western world, Frank Jacob and Gilmar Visoni-Alonzo show that the concept of such a military revolution is a myth perpetuated by a Eurocentric perspective on history.

The Cambridge World History: Volume 5, Expanding Webs of Exchange and Conflict, 500CE-1500CE Benjamin Z. Kedar, Merry E. Wiesner-Hanks, 2015-04-09 Volume 5 of the Cambridge World History series uncovers the cross-cultural exchange and conquest and the accompanying growth of regional and trans-regional states, religions, and economic systems during the period 500 to 1500 CE. The volume begins by outlining a series of core issues and processes across the world, including human relations with nature, gender, and family; social hierarchies; education; and warfare. Further essays examine maritime and land-based networks of long-distance trade and migration in agricultural and nomadic societies and the transmission and exchange of cultural forms, scientific knowledge, technologies, and text-based religious systems that accompanied these. The final section surveys the development of centralized regional states and empires in both the eastern and western hemispheres. Together, these essays by an international team of leading authors show how processes furthering cultural, commercial, and political integration within and between various regions of the world made this millennium a proto-global era.

The Eurasian Miracle Jack Goody, 2010 The idea of long term European dominance is characteristic of most evolutionary theories of human culture and society in the nineteenth century It was commonly believed that there was a natural progression from Antiquity through Feudalism to Capitalism which could not have taken place elsewhere Today there are many who still believe that this progression was part of a European miracle that underlay the rise to global supremacy of the West In this short book Jack Goody systematically dismantles this Eurocentric view of the world He argues that we need to look not for a European miracle but rather for a Eurasian miracle that went back to the Urban Revolution of the Bronze Age that affected the Near East India and China well before Europe and that was much advanced by the adoption of writing Under these conditions we find a long term exchange of information between East and West and the dominance of one followed by the dominance of the other in other words alternation rather than dominance There were measures during the Renaissance in Europe that made for continuous growth especially the secularization of learning but it appears that the period of Western supremacy is now coming to an end and that we are about to experience a further alternation in favour of the East

Peking Susan Naquin, 2001-01-15 The central character in Susan Naquin's extraordinary new book is the city of Peking during the Ming and Qing periods Using the city's temples as her point of entry Naquin carefully excavates Peking's varied public arenas the city's transformation over five centuries its human engagements and its rich cultural imprint This study shows how modern Beijing's glittering image as China's great and ancient capital came into being and reveals the shifting identities of a much more complex past one whose rich social and cultural history Naquin splendidly evokes Temples by providing a place where diverse groups could gather without the imprimatur of family or state made possible a surprising assortment of community building and identity defining activities By revealing how religious establishments of all kinds were used for fairs markets charity tourism politics and leisured sociability Naquin shows their decisive impact on Peking and at the same time illuminates their little appreciated role in Chinese cities generally Lacking most of the conventional sources for urban history she has relied particularly on a trove of commemorative inscriptions that express ideas about the relationship between human beings and gods about community service and public responsibility about remembering and being remembered The result is a book that will be essential reading in the field of Chinese studies for years to come
