Tecnologías de la información y la comunicación Ramón Carlos Suárez y Alonso,2007-01-01 El efecto 2000 puso en vilo a la humanidad la Nochevieja del año 1999 noche en la que podía haberse paralizado toda la tecnología mundial. Quizás se magnificó el posible efecto pero sirvió para que el mundo entero se diese cuenta de que estamos inmersos en la sociedad de la información y del conocimiento. Así como de la dependencia que tenemos de las tecnologías de la información y la comunicación. La nueva economía se basa en unos pilares aparentemente muy delicados: los datos secundarios de los meros abstractos que viajan en forma electrónica por el aire o por los cables. Pero además de delicados son poderosos puesto que los datos debidamente procesados se transforman en información de utilidad. La información analizada almacenada, transmitida, reutilizada y compartida genera conocimiento. En este material didáctico que Ideas propias Editorial le presenta se revisarán los principales conceptos relacionados con las tecnologías de la información y la comunicación, las bases de la informática y de las telecomunicaciones, los elementos de un ordenador, los tipos de redes locales y de telecomunicaciones, así como la estructura de la información y las aplicaciones informáticas y las tendencias en la sociedad de la información. El objetivo de esta obra es mostrar a cualquier lector de forma sencilla la complejidad de los sistemas de información y telecomunicación.
