Irish Media John Horgan,2012-11-12 Irish Media A Critical History maps the landscape of media in Ireland from the foundation of the modern state in 1922 to the present Covering all principal media forms print and electronic in the Republic and in Northern Ireland John Horgan shows how Irish history and politics have shaped the media of Ireland and in turn have been shaped by them Beginning in a country ravaged by civil war it traces the complexities of wartime censorship and details the history of media technology from the development of radio to the inauguration of television in the 1950s and 1960s It covers the birth development and sometimes the death of major Irish media during this period examining the reasons for failure and success and government attempts to regulate and respond to change Finally it addresses questions of media globalisation ownership and control and looks at issues of key significance for the future Horgan demonstrates why in a country whose political divisions and economic development have given it a place on the world stage out of all proportion to its size the media have been and remain key players in Irish history The Fourth Estate Mark O'Brien, 2017-01-09 This book examines the history of journalists and journalism in twentieth century Ireland While many media institutions have been subjected to historical scrutiny the professional and organisational development of journalists the changing practices of journalism and the contribution of journalists and journalism to the evolution of modern Ireland have not This book rectifies the deficit by mapping the development of journalism in Ireland from the late 1880s to today Placing the experiences of journalists and the practice of journalism at the heart of its analysis it examines for the first time the work of journalists within the ever changing context of Irish society Based on strong primary research including the previously unconsulted journals and records produced by the many journalistic representative organisations that came and went over the decades and written in an accessible and engaging style The Fourth Estate will appeal to anyone interested in journalism history the media and the development of Ireland as a modern nation Association Football and Society in Pre-partition Ireland Neal

Gregory, Niall A. Cunningham, C. D. Lloyd, Ian G. Shuttleworth, Paul S.

Ell,2020-03-04 Tap s the power of new geospatial technologies explore s the intersection of geography religion politics and identity in Irish history International Social Science Review Ireland s landscape is marked by fault lines of religious ethnic and political identity that have shaped its troubled history Troubled Geographies maps this history by detailing the patterns of change in Ireland from 16th century attempts to plant areas of Ireland with loyal English Protestants to defend against threats posed by indigenous Catholics through the violence of the latter part of the 20th century and the rise of the Celtic Tiger The book is concerned with how a geography laid down in the 16th and 17th centuries led to an amalgam based on religious belief ethnic national identity and political conviction that continues to shape the geographies of modern Ireland Troubled Geographies shows how changes in religious affiliation identity and territoriality have impacted Irish society during this period It explores the response of society in general and religion in particular to major cultural shocks such as the Famine and to long term processes such as urbanization Makes a strong case for a greater consideration of spatial information in historical analysis a message that is obviously appealing for geographers Journal of Interdisciplinary History A book like this is useful as a reminder of the struggles and the sacrifices of generations of unrest and conflict albeit that on a global scale the Irish troubles are just one of a myriad of disputes each with their own history and localized geography Journal of Historical Geography

Censorship in the Two Irelands, 1922-39 Peter Martin,2006 This is the first book to tell the story of censorship in Northern Ireland and the south between 1922 and 1939 Censorship in the Two Irelands examines the differences in how the two regimes treated freedom of speech and finds some surprising similarities Beginning with the history of censorship under British rule and during the Irish Revolution it shows how the new states built on that legacy It examines all forms of censorship in the period political film literature radio and theatre and puts them into an international context showing how the two Irelands at some times resembled other jurisdictions but also created their own unique legacies of repression This is the story of how a Unionist government treated Nationalist dissent IRA propaganda and labour organisations It compares Northern repression of these groups to southern actions against the IRA and Irish communists It also tells how the two states reacted to foreign culture in cinema and literature It shows how a powerful lobby of conservative Catholic activists convinced the Irish Free State to introduce stringent censorships of film and literature The scandalous decisions of the period when authors like Steinbeck Shaw and O Faolain were banned are examined but are also put in their international context The most detailed study yet of the early years of censorship in the two Irelands this work questions how serious either government really was about protecting freedom of expression It poses challenges about how far a state should tolerate dissent new ideas or controversial art problems that are as relevant today as they were eighty years ago Irish Economic and Social History, 1996 1995
