

- Structural elements - the bands unnerving performance and shots of urban landscapes
- Typical performance style - band members performing the song to the camera, looking directly at the lens and lip syncing the lyrics - making eye contact with the viewers as if the group are communicating directly to the audience
- Hypnotic chant of "this town is coming like a ghost town" - suggesting a nightmarish version of the world / wailing chorus - suggesting frightening prospect of the future
- "Can't go on no more" - tone of despair - also shown through the bands performance inside the car eg - verse 1 - stiff body language and dull facial expressions
- "All the clubs have bee closed down" - night clubs are supposed to be places where young people can meet and have a good time but they are closed so their lives are 'dead' or muted
- hellish chorus - madness in bands faces - conveys the anger felt and sense of insanity felt by young people who were abandoned by the uncaring elite.
- Cramming in the car uncomfortably. Could show their struggle to find a place in society beyond the confined vehicle.
- Towards the end of the chorus , its shown that one of the band members is thrown out the car - signifying their journey through life in 1980s and that not everyone will survive.

NARRATIVE ANALYSIS:

- Music begins with unnatural sounds of wind and shots of tower blocks that are taken from a worms eye view - makin observers appear insignificant and powerless - audiences might feel at unease from these opening tilting and panning shots of these buildings.
- In the music video, movements from one shot to the next is determined by the rhythm of the song - focusing on different skyscrapers with each beat - these are recognisable to audiences that they are skyscrapers from London
- Urban landscapes to be represented in an isolated and intimidating tone - focus on the young people affected and the government being blind to their needs -
