The Managerial School Sharon Gewirtz, 2003-12-16 The relationship between welfare and the state has undergone a sustained process of reconfiguration over the past two decades and managerialism has played a key role in this process In education parents are now seen as consumers and schools as small businesses their income dependent on their success in attracting customers within competitive local markets At the same time management practices borrowed from business such as target setting and performance monitoring now play a key role in regulating schools What kinds of schools are the reforms producing What impact are they having on school culture and values What are the social justice implications of applying a business model to the provision of schooling In The Managerial School Sharon Gerwartz draws on in depth interviews with teachers in a range of secondary schools and close observation of school practices to try to answer these questions Through a comparison of Conservative and New Labour policies she argues that New Labour s third way for education is a contradictory mix of neo liberal authoritarian and humanistic strands that is not in any real sense a new educational settlement This empirically based account of over a decade of education reform offers a unique insight into the effects of
