was putting locks of her children's hair into an envelope and attempting to seal it with hot sealing wax while Longfellow took a nap. Her dress suddenly caught fire though it is unclear exactly how burning wax or a lighted candle may have fallen onto it. Longfellow was awakened from his nap and rushed to help her throwing a rug over her though it was too small. He stifled the flames with his body as best he could but she was already badly burned. Over half a century later Longfellow's youngest daughter Annie explained the story differently claiming that there had been no candle or wax but that the fire had started from a self-lighting match that had fallen on the floor. Both accounts state that Fanny was taken to her room to recover and a doctor was called. She was in and out of consciousness throughout the night and was administered ether. She died shortly after 10:00 the next morning, July 10, after requesting a cup of coffee. Longfellow, in trying to save her, had burned himself badly enough so that he was unable to attend her funeral. His facial injuries led him to stop shaving and he wore a beard from then on that became his trademark.
