door frames others would rather lie about in the sun These differences are fascinating to behold and helpful to all those interested in sharing their home with a cat Found here are more than sixty of the most common breeds and hybrids from around the world

Cat and Human Personality Saethra Darling, 2020 Recent decades have seen a surge of interest in animal personality Most recently we have begun to investigate the personalities of pet animals and while most work has been done with pet dogs research into cat personality is increasing often with the goal of improving their welfare This dissertation first examines a current cat personality measurement program Feline ality TM designed to improve adoption rates and decrease euthanasia rates followed by an evaluation of associations between human and cat personality traits that might predict cat owners satisfaction with and attachment to their cats In the first chapter I consider the possible relationship between the personality dimensions measured by the Feline ality TM behavioral assay and subject variables of cats age sex color I then investigate elements of the convergent validity of Feline ality TM by comparing it with an established survey based human personality measurement tool IAS R Finally in an effort to address possible confirmation bias in the survey measurement of cat personality I evaluate relationships between the survey measure and cat signalment variables Results indicate that neither Feline ality TM nor the IAS R correlate with cat age sex or color nor was there evidence of confirmation bias in the survey The two personality dimensions measured by Feline ality TM were strongly correlated with each other and one was moderately correlated with a similar dimension of the IAS R The second chapter describes process and outcome evaluations of Feline ality TM following its implementation at the Seattle Animal Shelter SAS Feline ality TM was practiced at SAS in 2017 I consider data from a five year span 2015 2019 in order to evaluate any changes in cat adoption rates euthanasia rates return rates and length of time spent in the shelter that could be attributed to Feline ality TM I also examine process errors Results indicate an extremely high error rate in implementation of the program such that no changes in any outcomes could be reliably attributed to Feline ality TM It should be noted that errors in the Feline ality TM data were corrected prior to analysis in our first chapter Chapter three returns to a consideration of the IAS R as a possible replacement for Feline ality TM The IAS R measures two personality trait dimensions that characterize human interpersonal interactions Agency and Communion and that have been previously demonstrated in cats Zeigler Hill Highfill 2010 Similarity in Communion within cats owner dyads as well as reciprocity in Agency was shown to predict owner cat relationship satisfaction Zeigler Hill Highfill 2010 Using a large internet dataset I attempted to replicate this finding I extended the replication to include variables suggested by the original authors cat age and cat sex and looked not only at relationship satisfaction but also at owner attachment to their cats Results indicate partial replication similarity in Communion was positively correlated with relationship satisfaction though with a small effect size Neither similarities nor differences in Agency or Communion were related to attachment although relationship satisfaction and attachment were strongly correlated The final chapter begins with further exploratory analyses of the dataset used in the previous chapter In this instance I examined not only intradyadic similarities and differences in Agency and Communion between cats and their owners but also individual cat and human scores on each dimension independent of and in interaction with each other along with years of ownership as a control cat age cat sex all in both linear and curvilinear relation to relationship satisfaction and attachment The results of the exploratory analyses were then tested on a different dataset comprised of recently adopted cats in confirmatory analyses with the addition of a measurement of overall attitude towards pets as a control replacing years owned The results of the confirmatory analyses indicate that controlling for attitude towards pets only cat Agency was predictive of relationship satisfaction No other variable outside of attitude towards pets predicted attachment to pet cats I further describe important limitations in our field that include the lack of reliable and valid measurement tools for cat personality and the lack of a standardized nomenclature both of which are necessary for further advancement in this area of inquiry
