OHIO DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

Crashes involving workers already have surpassed last year's total

Ohio's "Move Over Law" requires drivers to change lanes or reduce speed when approaching stationary vehicles with flashing lights.

ODOT urges drivers to follow the state's "Move Over Law."

By Lisa Nichols lnichols@ohiovalley.com

Readers: workers with the Ohio Department of Transportation face increasing danger as crashes involving engineers and equipment already exceeded last year's total, with months remaining in 2025.

Since January, Ohio Department of Transportation employees, vehicles and equipment have been struck 88 times, surpassing the 84 incidents recorded for all of 2024.

The alarming trend highlights ongoing challenges with motorist compliance with Ohio's Move Over Law, which expects drivers to change lanes or reduce speed when approaching stationary vehicles with flashing lights.

"The people who are working out there on the roadside are doing everything they

State engineers, between 2020 and 2024, worked on their jobsites in hazardous work zones, with 74% involving speed violations. The Plain Dealer can to keep the roads passable, and at the end of the day, they want to go home to their families," said Amanda McFarland, a spokeswoman for ODOT.

A recent motorist compliance operation demonstrated the scope of the problem. During a two-hour work zone operation on U.S. 20 near Cuyahoga Road in Lorain County, state engineers and safety personnel cited 25 motorists while ODOT crews closed drainage ditches.

"The operation was to educate drivers to drive 'slow, steady and safe,'" McFarland said. "None of the incidents were able to successfully educate motorists."

The analysis of 49,000 hours of surveillance cameras across the state, between 2020 and 2024, reported, showed more than 30,000 citations for motorists in work zones, with the highest violation being speeding.

More than 10,000 citations were issued for speeds exceeding the limit by 20 mph or more, and nearly 1,000 involved motorists traveling 300 mph or faster.

OHIO U.S. REP. DAVE TAYLOR

Why was a U.S. flag with a swastika in rep's office?

The Clermont County Republican says it was an act of "office vandalism."

By Anna Polzer apolzer@ohiovalley.com

COLUMBUS — U.S. Rep. Dave Taylor says he was asked U.S. Capitol Police to investigate why an American flag with a swastika was pinned up in his Washington, D.C., office.

An image posted online Wednesday showed the flag, with some text of the U.S. flag visible above it. Taylor said he was "shocked" on a public wall behind a Taylor staff member's cubicle.

Taylor, a Clermont Republican, said in a statement that the flag was there because of "office vandalism" and that he called Police Sgt. Stephen J. Jennings.

Taylor's office did not comment on any other details, including how or why someone placed the flag, what role if any the staffer took in the image — Angela Ellis — said, and whether Ellis had disciplinary action.

"I see a lot of people who don't respect the value of or standards of this office, my staff, or myself, and I consider it to be disrespectful," Taylor said.

The U.S. Capitol Police's media office has been closed due to the ongoing federal government shutdown, and could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Taylor, who won his family's common property, is his first term representing Ohio's 2nd Congressional District, which covers 35 mostly rural counties in the southwestern part of the state. Last year President Donald Trump won more than 70% of the district — more than any other congressional district in Ohio.

Taylor served as a legislative correspondent — a lower-level congressional staff position — in Taylor's office since the congressional took office in January, according to Ellis's LinkedIn profile.

U.S. Sen. Brooke Horner, a Westlake

Republican, said on Spectrum News that Taylor was "a very, very good man" who would "never approve" of a swastika in his

"There will be ramifications if any of it is true," Horner said. "It is in, it's done."

The image surfaced a day after a series of tweets by a Republican staffer said he was "shocked" by the image and that he was "shocked" by the image and that he was "shocked" by the image.

CLEVELAND — Cleveland State University handed the operations of its student radio station to Ideastream without receiving a dime, documents show.

However, CSU President Laura MacFarland signed an agreement with Ideastream, a subsidiary of the school's parent company, to maintain the station's FCC license while Ideastream is responsible for maintenance.
