Groshong,2013-03-14 Manyimportant decisions ranging from locating an oil prospect or a land fill site to determining the location and sizeof an earthquake producingfault are based on geo logical maps Because a map scale structure is never completely sampled in three dimensions geological maps and the cross sections derived from maps are always interpretations The interpretation may be complicated by direct structural observati ons likebedding attitudes that are misleading because they represent a local structu re not the map scale structure Some data may simply be wrong The interpretation of the geometry of even a single horizon therefore alwaysinvolvesinferences about the validity and meaning of the observations themselves as well as the nature of the geometry between the observation points How is an accurate interpretation to be constructed and how is it to be validated once complete The objective of this book is to demonstrate the concepts and techniques required to obtain the most complete and accurate interpretation of the geometry of structures at the map scale The methods are designed primarily for interpretations based on outcrop measurements and subsurface information of the type derived from well logs and two dimensional seismic reflection profiles These forms of information all present a similar interpretive problem which is to define the geometry from isolated and discontinuous observations The underlying philosophy of interpretation is that structures are three dimensional solid bodies and that data from throughout the body should be integrated into an internally consistent interpretation Transactions of the Section on Laryngology, Otology and Rhinology of the American Medical Association ,1926 Technical Memorandum Waterways Experiment Station (U.S.),1976
