Treating AIDS Thurka Sangaramoorthy, 2014-03-26 There is an inherently powerful and complex paradox underlying HIV AIDS prevention between the focus on collective advocacy mobilized to combat global HIV AIDS and the staggeringly disproportionate rates of HIV AIDS in many places In Treating AIDS Thurka Sangaramoorthy examines the everyday practices of HIV AIDS prevention in the United States from the perspective of AIDS experts and Haitian immigrants in South Florida Although there is worldwide emphasis on the universality of HIV AIDS as a social political economic and biomedical problem developments in HIV AIDS prevention are rooted in and focused exclusively on disparities in HIV AIDS morbidity and mortality framed through the rubric of race ethnicity and nationality Everyone is at equal risk for contracting HIV AIDS Sangaramoorthy notes but the ways in which people experience and manage that risk and the disease itself is highly dependent on race ethnic identity sexuality gender immigration status and other notions of difference Sangaramoorthy documents in detail the work of AIDS prevention programs and their effect on the health and well being of Haitians a transnational community long plagued by the stigma of being stereotyped in public discourse as disease carriers By tracing the ways in which public knowledge of AIDS prevention science circulates from sites of surveillance and regulation to various clinics and hospitals to the social worlds embraced by this immigrant community she ultimately demonstrates the ways in which AIDS prevention programs help to reinforce categories of individual and collective difference and how they continue to sustain the persistent and pernicious idea of race and ethnicity as risk factors for the disease
