The Impact of New Health Imperatives on Educational Policy and Schooling

Jan Wright, Valerie Harwood, 2016-02-05 Currently a great deal of public discourse around health is on the assumed relationship between childhood inactivity young people's diets and a putative steep rise in obesity Children and young people are increasingly being identified as a population at risk in relation to these health concerns Such concerns are driving what might be described as new health imperatives which prescribe the choices young people should make around lifestyle physical activity body regulation dietary habits and sedentary behaviour These health imperatives are a powerful force driving major policy initiatives on health and education in a number of countries in the Western world Schools in particular have been targeted for the implementation of a plethora of initiatives designed to help children and young people lose weight become more active and change their eating patterns inside and outside school Addressing these issues requires an innovative theoretical approach Neither the fields of eating disorders nor obesity research has addressed these issues from a sociological and pedagogical perspective The contributors to this edited collection draw on a range of social theories including Michel Foucault and Basil Bernstein to interpret the data collected across three countries Australia and New Zealand United Kingdom and from a range of primary and secondary schools Each chapter addresses various aspects of the relationship between health imperatives as constituted in government policies school programs and practices their recontextualised in school practices and the impact of this on the subjectivities of children and teachers This book was originally published as a special issue of Discourse Studies in the Cultural Politics of Education

Scientific Development of Sport Pedagogy Paul G. Schempp, Research In Physical Educ.& Sp Andrew Sparkes, 2012-10-12 The text aims to provide an in depth exploration of a range of traditions that are beginning to reshape the nature of research in physical education and the sports sciences The chapters are all original contributions by leading scholars that bring together new data from a variety of research approaches Each offers its own specific challenge to the orthodoxy that has dominated the field A range of traditions are considered by the contributors who provide specific examples from their own work that include phenomenology ethnography life histories discourse analysis feminist research curriculum history and action research These cases are highlight for the reader the basic assumption of each approach the significance of the understanding they develop and their potential for the future development of research in physical education and sport The forms of analysis provided should be of interest to a wider audience such as students of education and the social sciences It is aimed at physical education researchers BEd MEd BSc MSc courses on physical education and sport and teachers of sports science
