

Intermittent intravenous anaesthesia for outpatient dentistry

A study using propanidid

D. R. Cadle T. B. Boulton M. Spencer Swaine

The intermittent intravenous technique of outpatient dental anaesthesia with methohexitone¹ is, despite controversy², an established technique in the dental surgery both for extractions and conservative dentistry.

Propanidid, a eugenol derivative, has been fairly extensively used both as an induction agent and in single doses for short procedures and its pharmacology has been adequately described by a number of workers^{3,4}. The rapid recovery from the effects of this agent is related to the fact that it is destroyed in the body and not merely redistributed as is the case with the barbiturates.

In this paper we report a trial of the use of the drug as a sole agent in outpatient dental anaesthesia by the intermittent technique.

MATERIAL

Selection of patients

The series was intended to include all adult patients presenting themselves at a routine consultant outpatient teaching session. Many of the anaesthetics were administered and some of the teeth extracted by medical students under supervision.

In children under ten years of age inhalation or intravenous anaesthesia was used according to which was considered would be most acceptable to the individual child. In fact, 22 children presented of which 19 did not receive propanidid.

Dental work

In table 1 the procedures are grouped as extractions and conservative procedures. There was a single case of manipulation of jaw but the relaxation produced was not impressive.

METHOD

Each patient was weighed and an initial dose calculated at 6–8mg/kg using the manufacturers' dosage guide. A 2½% solution of propanidid was used
