Thomson,2018-08-25 In 1800 shoes in the United States were made by craftsmen each trained to create an entire shoe A century later shoes were mass produced in factories employing dozens of machines and specialized workers Ross Thomson describes this transition from craft to mechanized production in one of the largest American industries of the nineteenth century Early shoe machinery originated through innovations made by shoemakers tailors and especially machinists It continued to evolve through a process of learning by selling in which sales of one generation of machines led to technological learning and ongoing invention by those who used serviced and sold them As a result of this process the mechanization of the shoe industry and the manufacturers of the machinery it used including such firms as Singer and United Shoe Machinery evolved together In researching the process of industrialization Thomson examined nearly 8 000 patents Comparing the patent information with directories for more than eighty American cities he was able to find out who the inventors were who employed them how many patents they held and the extent to which their inventions were used Originally published in 1989 A UNC Press Enduring Edition UNC Press Enduring Editions use the latest in digital technology to make available again books from our distinguished backlist that were previously out of print These editions are published unaltered from the original and are presented in affordable paperback formats bringing readers both historical and cultural value

Technology, Industrial Conflict and the Development of Technical Education in 19th-Century England Bernard P. Cronin,2024-11-01 This title was first published in 2001 Nineteenth century employers played a crucial role in the training and education of young workers in England This multi disciplinary study traces the connection between problems of technical education development and the increasingly antagonistic relations with skilled workers culminating in the Great Strike and Lockout of 1897 Cronin demonstrates that employers dominated by economic short termism extended their hegemony beyond the boundaries of the factory gates Their reluctance to endorse and sponsor technical education radically influenced the perception of technical education held by government and local authorities      Life and Labor Charles

Lock, Stock, and Barrel Clayton E. Cramer, 2018-02-21 This provocative book debunks the myth that American gun culture was intentionally created by gun makers and demonstrates that gun ownership and use have been a core part of American society since our colonial origins Revisionist historians argue that American gun culture and manufacturing are relatively recent developments They further claim that widespread gun violence was largely absent from early American history because guns of all types and especially handguns were rare before 1848 According to these revisionists American gun culture was the creation of the first mass production gun manufacturers who used clever marketing to sell guns to people who neither wanted nor needed them However as proven in this first scholarly history of gun culture in early America gun ownership and use have in fact been central to American society from its very beginnings Lock Stock and Barrel The Origins of American Gun Culture shows that gunsmithing and gun manufacturing were important parts of the economies of the colonies and the early republic and explains how the American gun industry helped to create our modern world of precision mass production and high wages for workers
