subject of the Study of Child Life there may be lurking doubts in your mind as to whether any reliable rules can really be laid down They seem to arise mostly from the perception of the great difference between children What will do for one child will not do for another Some children are easily persuaded and gentle others willful still others sullen unresponsive How then is it possible that a system of education and training can be devised suitable for their various dispositions We must remember that children are much more alike than they are different One may have blue eyes another gray another black but they all have two We are therefore in a position to make rules for creatures having two eyes and these rules apply to eyes of all colors Children may be nervous sanguine bilious or plethoric but they all have the same kind of internal organs and the same general rules of health apply to them all In this series of lessons I have endeavored to set forth principles briefly and to confirm them by instances within the experience of every observer of childhood The rules given are such as are held at present by the best educators to be based upon sound philosophy not at variance with the slight array of scientific facts at our command Perhaps you yourself may be able to add to the number of reliable facts intelligently reported that must be collected before much greater scientific advance is possible There is to be sure an art of application of these rules both in matters of health of body and of health of mind and this art must be worked out by each mother for each individual child We all recognize that it is a long endeavor before we can apply to our own lives such principles of conduct as we heartily acknowledge to be right Why then expect to be able to apply principles instantly and unerringly to a little child If a rule fails when you attempt to apply it before questioning the principle may it not be well to question your own tact and skill So far as I can advise with you in special instances of difficulty I shall be very glad to do so not that I shall always know what to do myself but that we can get a little more light upon the problems by conferring together I know well how difficult a matter this of child training is for every day in the management of my own family of children I find each philosophy science and art as I can command very much put to the test The Author Child Life Assessment Kathryn Cantrell, Cara Sisk, Brittany Wittenberg Camp, 2024-10-11 This textbook the first to focus on child life assessment educates seasoned child life specialists and child life students about the significant impact that robust psychosocial assessments have on child life interventions for children and families coping with hospitalization chronic illness and life transitions Child life specialists engage in a cyclical process of assessment planning intervention and evaluation to support healthy development and coping The authors guide readers through current evidence based child life assessment practices and propose future directions for the growing child life profession The book opens with chapters discussing the foundations of child life assessment including its history moves to tools and approaches then considers specific settings and populations and concludes with future directions for the profession Case examples and professional perspectives make explicit assessment applications to child life practice National Child Research Act United States.
