

Studying Poetry

Look for patterns in the language, sounds, look of the words, length of lines, rhythm and word-pictures created.

Main Idea

Internal/external crisis. What is the main idea of the poem? Usually it will be some kind of personal crisis, either internal or external, that prompted the poet to write.

Diction

Word choice. Poems, particularly short poems, are concentrated forms of emotion where words cannot be wasted, so must be chosen with extreme care.

Themes

The underlying ideas, common to all human life: love, marriage, death, etc. When studying the work of a poet, themes frequently recur in many of his/her poems.

Personal Response

Reasons for liking/disliking the poem. This is the connection the poem has made to the reader's own background, experiences and preoccupations. It should be more than simply 'I liked it' or 'I didn't like it'.

Rhyme

Rhyme is the repetition of sounds, usually at the ends of lines, at regular intervals. Poetry without any rhyme is called Blank Verse. To identify rhyme, each rhyming sound is given an identifying letter of the alphabet, starting with A.

Structure & Form

Poems are often structured into verses and stanzas, with specific rhyming patterns and metre. Consider how rhythm, rhyme scheme, line/stanza length, sentence form and style are used, and change, throughout the poem.

Metre

Pattern of stressed/unstressed syllables. All language has its own natural rhythm. Words are constructed of syllables and poetry relies on the stress placed on particular syllables in a word to create an effect and build a pattern of sounds.

Imagery

Metaphors, similes, symbols. The word pictures created by the poet; these may be direct allegories or similes, they may be less obvious metaphors or symbols. Imagery is often connected to the poet's themes.

Rhyme

Structure & Form

Metre

Imagery

When comparing poems, consider how they are both different and similar. Use the main features above to help you organise your ideas in a logical way. Although you will need to look at each poem individually to plan your response, avoid writing about each poem separately; comment on both poems throughout.
