The Carpetbaggers of Kabul and Other American-Afghan Entanglements Jennifer L. Fluri, Rachel Lehr, 2017 The 2001 invasion of Afghanistan by United States and coalition forces was followed by a flood of aid and development dollars and experts representing well over two thousand organizations each with separate policy initiatives geopolitical agendas and socioeconomic interests This book examines the everyday actions of people associated with this international effort with a special emphasis on small players individuals and groups who charted alternative paths outside the existing networks of aid and development This focus highlights the complexities complications and contradictions at the intersection of the everyday and the geopolitical showing how dominant geopolitical narratives influence daily life in places like Afghanistan and what happens when the goals of aid workers or the needs of aid recipients do not fit the narrative Specifically this book examines the use of gender need and grief as drivers for both common and exceptional responses to geopolitical interventions Throughout this work Jennifer L. Fluri and Rachel Lehr describe intimate encounters at a microscale to complicate and dispute the ways in which Afghans and their country have been imagined described fetishized politicized vilified and rescued The authors identify the ways in which Afghan men and women have been narrowly categorized as perpetrators and victims respectively They discuss several projects to show how gender and grief became forms of currency that were exchanged for different social economic and political opportunities Such entanglements suggest the power and influence of the United States while illustrating the ways in which individuals and groups have attempted to chart alternative avenues of interaction intervention and interpretation
