mundane work undertaken by the vast majority of campaigners across the decades with due consideration of the arguments and organized resistance of the opponents of women's suffrage This is a study that focuses on the survival of the campaign in the face of wartime difficulties detailing the much neglected last decade of the campaign between the granting of partial enfranchisement in 1918 and the triumph of equal franchise in 1928 British Sources of Information P.

Jo Vellacott,2016-07-01 Catherine Marshall was a vital figure in the women's suffrage movement in Britain before the First World War Using her remarkable political skills on behalf of the major non militant organization the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies NUWSS she built close connections with major suffragist politicians leading some in all three parties to consider adopting a measure of women's enfranchisement as a party plank By 1913 Marshall was uniquely placed as a lobbyist with inside information and sympathetic listeners in every party Through her the dynamically re organized NUWSS brought the women's suffrage issue to the fore of public awareness It pushed the Labour Party to adopt a strong stand on women's suffrage and raised working class consciousness re awakening a long dormant demand for full adult enfranchisement Had the general election due in 1915 taken place NUWSS financial and organizational support for the Labour Party might well have been substantial enough to influence the final results These impressive achievements were forgotten by the time Catherine Marshall died in 1961 Even recent research on the period has failed to show the full significance of the issue of women's suffrage much less Marshall's part in the movement Jo Vellacott's revealing account of Marshall's political work also includes vivid descriptions of a liberal Victorian childhood a strangely purposeless young adulthood and the heady experiences of women who through the awakening of political consciousness forged a lifestyle to fit their new aspirations By the Sweat of Their Brow Angela V. John,2013-11-05 The pit brow lasses who sorted coal and performed a variety of jobs above ground at British coal mines prompted a violent debate about women's work in the nineteenth century Seen as the prime example of degraded womanhood the pit brow woman was regarded as an aberration in a masculine domain cruelly torn from her natural sphere the home The attempt to restrict women's work at the mines in the 1880s highlights the dichotomy between the fashionable ideal of womanhood and the necessity and reality of female manual labour Although only a tiny percentage of the colliery labour force the pit lasses aroused an interest out of all proportion to their numbers and their work became a test case for women's outdoor manual employment Angela John discusses the implications of this debate showing how it encapsulates many of the ambivalences of late Victorian attitudes towards working class female employment and at the same time raises wider questions both about women's work in industries seen as traditionally male enclaves and about the ways in which women within the working community have been presented by historians This book was first published in 1980
