Solid Waste Collection Practice:

Solid Waste Management Ramesha Chandrappa, Diganta Bhusan Das, 2012-06-30 Solid waste was already a problem long before water and air pollution issues attracted public attention. Historically the problem associated with solid waste can be dated back to prehistoric days. Due to the invention of new products, technologies and services, the quantity and quality of the waste have changed over the years. Waste characteristics not only depend on income, culture and geography but also on a society's economy and situations like disasters that affect that economy. There was tremendous industrial activity in Europe during the industrial revolution. The twentieth century is recognized as the American Century and the twenty-first century is recognized as the Asian Century in which everyone wants to earn as much as possible. After Asia, the currently developing Africa could next take the center stage. With transitions in their economies, many countries have also witnessed an explosion of waste quantities. Solid waste problems and approaches to tackling them vary from country to country. For example, while efforts are made to collect and dispose hospital waste through separate mechanisms in India, it is burnt together with municipal solid waste in Sweden. While transboundary movement of waste has been addressed in numerous international agreements, it still reaches developing countries in many forms. While thousands of people depend on waste for their livelihood throughout the world, many others face problems due to poor waste management. In this context, solid waste has not remained an issue to be tackled by the local urban bodies alone. It has become a subject of importance for engineers as well as doctors, psychologists, economists and climate scientists and any others. There are huge changes in waste management in different parts of the world at different times in history. To address these issues, an effort has been made by the authors to combine their experience and bring together a new text book on the theory and practice of the subject, covering the important relevant literature at the same time.

Household solid waste management is a severe problem in East Africa capital cities Domestic actors tend to be neglected in their role in solving the problem This book develops a new conceptual framework for analyzing the role of households in solid waste management in East Africa s capital cities This conceptual framework is derived from the theory of the Modernized Mixture Approach By focusing on households in informal settlements in particular domestic routines for handling wastes are analyzed for their technical and social dimensions By elaborating upon the technical and social aspects of domestic solid wastes and the role of householders in producing and handling these wastes this book adds to the scanty body of scientific knowledge of sustainable waste management by householders in East African countries The knowledge generated with respect to technical and social dimensions can be used in the future by researchers and policy makers in SWM policies both in East Africa and comparable situations elsewhere in the world Recent Advances in
