Strategic Assessment And Development Of Interorganizational Influence In The Absence Of Hierarchical Authority:

Strategic Assessment and Development of Interorganizational Influence in the Absence of Hierarchical Authority Catherine H. Augustine, 2003 Undertaken for the Department of Defense's Office of the Chancellor for Education and Professional Development this report addresses the need of organizations to exert influence in situations where they lack the hierarchical authority that would make such influence straightforward It does so by presenting a three stage framework that will help such organizations recognize and capitalize on the power and influence options available to them Strategic Assessment and Development of Interorganizational Influence in the Absence of Hierarchical Authority ,2003 The governance of civilian postsecondary education and professional development in the Department of Defense DoD is highly decentralized The many educational institutions programs and courses of instruction offered to DoD civilians respond to influence from both within and outside DoD Institutions within DoD are typically governed by several formal sponsors and are also influenced by boards of visitors or advisors accrediting agencies licensing bodies and other governing entities that play important roles in the higher education sector outside DoD In 1998 the DoD Office of the Chancellor for Education and Professional Development was added to the complex multiorganizational network governing civilian postsecondary educational activities as the primary advocate for academic quality and cost effectiveness Unlike the formal sponsors the Chancellor's office was not endowed with hierarchical authority over DoD providers of education It must therefore rely on other sources of power to achieve its mission of influencing quality and cost effectiveness Previous RAND research on strategic planning for the Chancellor's office Levy et al 2001 considered possible roles for the office given its mission and charter This report extends that work by offering a systematic approach to the assessment of interorganizational influence and strategies for its development in the absence of hierarchical authority The approach presented here draws on research from social psychology organizational behavior and sociology and is designed for use by the Chancellor's office and other similar organizations participating in the governance of education training and professional development ET D Selected Rand Abstracts Rand Corporation, 2002 Includes publications previously listed in the supplements to the Index of selected publications of the Rand Corporation Oct 1962 Feb 1963 American Book Publishing Record ,2003 Annual Report Rand Corporation, 2003 Forthcoming Books Rose Army, 2003 Books in Print Supplement ,2002 Sociological Abstracts Leo P.
