higher incidence of lead poisoning cancer asthma and other diseases linked to environmental ills And yet Harrison reports some regulatory staff view these problems as beyond their agencies area of concern requiring too many resources or see neutrality as demanding color blind administration Drawing on more than 160 interviews with interviewees including 89 current or former agency staff members and more than 50 environmental justice activists and others who interact with regulatory agencies and more than 50 hours of participant observation of agency meetings both open and closed door Harrison offers a unique account of how bureaucrats resist undermine and disparage environmental justice reform and how environmental justice reformers within the agencies fight back by trying to change regulatory practice and culture from the inside out Harrison argues that equity not just aggregated overall improvement should be a metric for evaluating environmental regulation
