

RADIO: STILL THE BACKBONE OF THE FORUM NETWORK

In 1954, The Conservative movement was often not heard and it was not getting any louder. Why? Because Conservatives were talking to each other. They were sharing thoughts, developing ideas, and discussing philosophical issues. The radio had no choice but to listen to the conversation. That is why the Motion Picture Forum came into being to provide a national forum for the discussion of the issues. The Motion Picture Forum is now the largest radio network in the country, and it is the backbone of the Conservative movement.

TELEVISION: GROWING SUPPLEMENT TO THE RADIO NETWORK

The advent of the television age has led the Motion Picture Forum to expand into yet another medium. Now, millions of Americans can see the Motion Picture Forum program broadcasted on their television sets. The Motion Picture Forum program broadcasted on television sets is the same as the program broadcasted on the radio. This is the first step in the process of the Conservative movement.

Richard Nixon and John Wayne in the Motion Picture Forum. Nixon, who was the first to appear on the television show, has made the Motion Picture Forum a very effective program for the Conservative movement.
