what you do in life keep it simple and don't be afraid to fail life is an adventure The Cook, the Diner, and the Mind Marc Luxen, 2018-07-15 This book is NOT a how to cook book but a how to think about cooking book That is why I think this book will be interesting and useful to cooks from experienced professional cooks to people who can hardly cook Speaking of which the reasons why many people do not cook to fullest of their abilities or not at all are purely psychological reasons Just think about it anyone can acquire the physical skills to become a decent cook in a relatively short time Compared to becoming a half decent drummer of guitar player becoming a half decent cook is a walk in the park You only think you do not have the time you think are not interested you think it is all far too complicated you think you have lost interest in cooking you think are too important to cook you think you know it all already you think you are wasting your talents in the kitchen you think you think you think So we are going to pay some attention to that thinking of yours How are we going to do this Most cookbooks seem to think you do not At best you are a package of some skills and knowledge but more often you are just regarded as a soulless emotionless manipulator of tools following instructions The kitchen is a place completely disconnected from you and your world and the tools you use have nothing to do with you Dice the onion whisk until creamy I think it is high time to get you back in the kitchen In the chapter Can you cook we look at the strange finding that good cooks usually have a reasonable idea of how good they are in the kitchen but that many bad cooks have no idea how bad they are and actually are convinced they are quite good let's hope you are not one of those How do you know which one you are Read on Then I will take you back even before the stone age and make a point that we are the cooking ape we could have never become us with our large brains without cooking our food We big brained apes Homo sapiens and just before us Homo Erectus have been cooking for two million years That is astonishing because we Homo sapiens have been around for just two hundred thousand years Then I will show you how cooking our food shaped our societies made a thing like marriage necessary and put women around the fire and in the kitchen for better or for worse Next we turn to a bit of pure psychology how do we process information How do we see hear smell taste and touch You will see that we perceive the world much more with our brain than with our senses that we in fact construct the world we don't just get it We will use these insights later to explain strange effects in the kitchen why the name of a dish changes how it tastes how the shape of the serving plate the music how your brain uses almost anything to construct taste Memory is next I will show you how your memory works and how you can make it work for you in the kitchen by applying memory tricks If you realize your memory is nothing like a hard disk but more a story producing database of ever changing knowledge with a preference for pictures all sort of cool tricks become possible Now we are ready to look at multi sensory experiences and cooking We look at how you can manipulate all information around food to change experiences of the diners Here we will also have a look at the psychology of wine tasting Then we will turn to recipes and techniques and how they influence the way you think about cooking and the way you cook and how to use your kitchen your knife and dealing with mistakes Next up are the cooks and diners themselves We will look at individual differences and you will get some handy questionnaires to check what kind of cook and diner you and the ones around you are Then comes the menu how should the menu look how do you name dishes and not unimportantly how do you price them Last up is psychological aspects of cooking and eating healthy

Kitchens, Cooking, and Eating in Medieval Italy Katherine A. McIver, 2017-10-16 The modern twenty first century kitchen has an array of time saving equipment for preparing a meal a state of the art stove and refrigerator a microwave oven a food processor a blender and a variety of topnotch pots pans and utensils We take so much for granted as we prepare the modern meal not just in terms of equipment but also the ingredients without needing to worry about availability or seasonality We cook with gas or electricity at the turn of the switch we have instant heat But it wasn't always so Just step back a few centuries to say the 1300s and we'd find quite a different kitchen if there was one at all We might only have a fireplace in the main living space of a small cottage If we were lucky enough to have a kitchen the majority of the cooking would be done over an open hearth we'd build a fire of wood or coal and move a cauldron over the fire to prepare a stew or soup A drink might be heated or kept warm in a long handled saucepan set on its own trivet beside the fire Food could be fried in a pan grilled on a gridiron or turned on a spit We might put together a small improvised oven for baking Regulating the heat of the open flame was a demanding task Cooking on an open hearth was an all embracing way of life and most upscale kitchens had more than one fireplace with chimneys for ventilation One fireplace was kept burning at a low steady heat at all times for simmering or boiling water and the others used for grilling on a spit over glowing radiant embers This is quite a different situation than in our modern era unless we were out camping and cooking over an open fire In this book Katherine McIver explores the medieval kitchen from its location and layout like Francesco Datini of Prato two kitchens to its equipment the hearth the fuels vessels and implements and how they were used to who did the cooking man or woman and who helped We'll look at the variety of ingredients spices herbs meats fruits vegetables food preservation and production salted fish cured meats cheese making and look through recipes cookbooks and gastronomic texts to complete the picture of cooking in the medieval kitchen Along the way she looks at illustrations like the miniatures from the Tacuinum Sanitatis a medieval health handbook as well as paintings and engravings to give us an idea of the workings of a medieval kitchen including hearth cooking the equipment used how cheese was made harvesting ingredients among other things She explores medieval cookbooks such works as Anonimo Veneziano Libro per cuoco fourteenth century Anonimo Toscano Libro della cucina fourteenth century Anonimo Napoletano end of thirteenth early fourteenth century Liber de coquina Anonimo Medidonale Due libri di cucina fourteenth century Magninus Mediolanensis Maino de Maineri Opusculum de saporibus fourteenth century Johannes Bockenheim Il registro di cucina fifteenth century Maestro Martino's Il Libro de arte coquinaria fifteenth century and Bartolomeo Sacchi called Platina's On Right Pleasure and Good Health 1470 This is the story of the medieval kitchen and its operation from the thirteenth century until the late fifteenth century
