US Narratives of Nuclear Terrorism Since 9/11 David Seed, 2019-04-06 This study examines the US fiction and related films which makes a series of interventions in the cultural debate over the threat of nuclear terrorism It traces the beginnings of this anxiety from the 1970s which increased during the 1990s after the collapse of the Soviet Union The traumatic events of 9 11 became a major reference point for this fiction which expressed the fear that of a second and worse 9 11 The study examines narratives of conspiracies which are detected and forestalled and of others which lead to the worst of all outcomes nuclear detonations sometimes delivered by suitcase nukes In some of these narratives the very fate of the nation hangs in the balance in the face of nuclear apocalypse The discussion considers cases of attacks by electromagnetic pulse EMP cyberterrorism and even bioterrorism Some of the authors examined are present or former politicians members of the CIA and former president Bill Clinton

Culture, Crisis and America's War on Terror Stuart Croft, 2006-09-14 Since the infamous events of 9 11 the fear of terrorism and the determination to strike back against it has become a topic of enormous public debate The war on terror discourse has developed not only through American politics but via other channels including the media the church music novels films and television and therefore permeates many aspects of American life Stuart Croft suggests that the process of this production of knowledge has created a very particular form of common sense which shapes relationships jokes and even forms of tattoos Understanding how a social process of crisis can be mapped out and how that process creates assumptions allows policy making in America s war on terror to be examined from new perspectives Using IR approaches together with insights from cultural studies this book develops a dynamic model of crisis which seeks to understand the war on terror as a cultural phenomenon Inside the Revolution Joel C.
