Action in Perception Alva Noë, 2006-01-20 Perception is not something that happens to us or in us writes Alva Noë It is something we do In Action in Perception Noë argues that perception and perceptual consciousness depend on capacities for action and thought that perception is a kind of thoughtful activity Touch not vision should be our model for perception Perception is not a process in the brain but a kind of skillful activity of the body as a whole We enact our perceptual experience To perceive according to this enactive approach to perception is not merely to have sensations it is to have sensations that we understand In Action in Perception Noë investigates the forms this understanding can take He begins by arguing on both phenomenological and empirical grounds that the content of perception is not like the content of a picture the world is not given to consciousness all at once but is gained gradually by active inquiry and exploration Noë then argues that perceptual experience acquires content thanks to our possession and exercise of practical bodily knowledge and examines among other topics the problems posed by spatial content and the experience of color He considers the perspectival aspect of the representational content of experience and assesses the place of thought and understanding in experience Finally he explores the implications of the enactive approach for our understanding of the neuroscience of perception

Life and Narrative Brian Schiff, A. Elizabeth McKim, Sylvie Patron, 2017-01-17 The challenge of life and literary narrative is the central and perennial mystery of how people encounter manage and inhabit a self and a world of their own and others creations With a nod to the eminent scholar and psychologist Jerome Bruner Life and Narrative The Risks and Responsibilities of Storying Experience explores the circulation of meaning between experience and the recounting of that experience to others A variety of arguments center around the kind of relationship life and narrative share with one another In this volume rather than choosing to argue that this relationship is either continuous or discontinuous editors Brian Schiff A. Elizabeth McKim and Sylvie Patron and their contributing authors reject the simple binary and masterfully incorporate a more nuanced approach that has more descriptive appeal and theoretical traction for readers Exploring such diverse and fascinating topics as Narrative and the Law Narrative Fiction the Short Story and Life The Body as Biography and The Politics of Memory Life and Narrative features important research and perspectives from both up and coming researchers and prominent scholars in the field many of which who are widely acknowledged for moving the needle forward on the study of narrative in their respective disciplines and beyond

Reframing Disability and Quality of Life Narelle Warren, Lenore Manderson, 2013-03-12 This volume brings together two parallel fields of interest One is the understanding among psychologists and other social scientists of the limits to psychometric measurement and the challenges in generating information about quality of life and wellbeing that enable comparison across time and place at both individual and population levels The second is the interest among anthropologists and others in the lived experience of chronic illness and disability including the unpredictable fluctuations in perceived health and capability Chronic conditions and physical impairments are assumed to impact negatively on people's quality of life affecting them psychologically socially and economically While some of these conditions have declined in prevalence as a result of prenatal diagnosis early successful interventions and changes in medical technology and surgery many of these conditions are on the increase as a consequence of improved life saving medication and technology and greater longevity Quality of life is often used as an indicator for successful and high quality health services and good access to medical attention and surgery for hip replacements or laser surgery to improve vision for instance But it is also used as an argument against interventions when such interventions are seen to prolong life for its own sake Yet we also know that people vary their idea of quality as a result of the context of fluctuations in their own health status the presence or absence of pain or discomfort and as a result of variations in social and economic contextual factors In exploring these questions this volume contributes to emerging debates related to individual health outcomes but also to the social and other individual determinants that influence everyday life Understanding these broader contextual factors will contribute to our knowledge of the kinds of services support systems and infrastructure that provide people with good quality of life and a sense of wellbeing regardless of their physical health capability and functioning The volume includes scholars from all continents who have been encouraged to think critically and to engage with the descriptive methodological social policy and clinical implications of their work
