Towards a New Cognitive Neuroscience: Modeling Natural Brain

Dynamics Klaus Gramann, Tzyy-Ping Jung, Daniel P. Ferris, Chin-Teng Lin, Scott Makeig, 2014-10-03 Decades of brain imaging experiments have revealed important insights into the architecture of the human brain and the detailed anatomic basis for the neural dynamics supporting human cognition However technical restrictions of traditional brain imaging approaches including functional magnetic resonance tomography fMRI positron emission tomography PET and magnetoencephalography MEG severely limit participants movements during experiments As a consequence our knowledge of the neural basis of human cognition is rooted in a dissociation of human cognition from what is arguably its foremost and certainly its evolutionarily most determinant function organizing our behavior so as to optimize its consequences in our complex multi scale and ever changing environment The concept of natural cognition therefore should not be separated from our fundamental experience and role as embodied agents acting in a complex partly unpredictable world To gain new insights into the brain dynamics supporting natural cognition we must overcome restrictions of traditional brain imaging technology First the sensors used must be lightweight and mobile to allow monitoring of brain activity during free participant movements New hardware technology for electroencephalography EEG and near infrared spectroscopy NIRS allows recording electrical and hemodynamic brain activity while participants are freely moving New data driven analysis approaches must allow separation of signals arriving at the sensors from the brain and from non brain sources neck muscles eyes heart the electrical environment etc Independent component analysis ICA and related blind source separation methods allow separation of brain activity from non brain activity from data recorded during experimental paradigms that stimulate natural cognition Imaging the precisely timed distributed brain dynamics that support all forms of our motivated actions and interactions in both laboratory and real world settings requires new modes of data capture and of data processing Synchronously recording participants motor behavior brain activity and other physiology as well as their physical environment and external events may be termed mobile brain body imaging MoBI Joint multi stream analysis of recorded MoBI data is a major conceptual mathematical and data processing challenge This Research Topic is one result of the first international MoBI meeting in Delmenhorst Germany in September 2013 During an intense workshop researchers from all over the world presented their projects and discussed new technological developments and challenges of this new imaging approach Several of the presentations are compiled in this Research Topic that we hope may inspire new research using the MoBI paradigm to investigate natural cognition by recording and analyzing the brain dynamics and behavior of participants performing a wide range of naturally motivated actions and interactions

Neuroergonomics Raja Parasuraman, Matthew

Rizzo,2008-02-13 Neuroergonomics can be defined as the study of brain and behavior at work It combines two disciplines neuroscience the study of brain function and human factors the study of how to match technology with the capabilities and limitations of people so they can work effectively and safely The goal of merging these two fields is to use the startling discoveries of human brain and physiological functioning both to inform the design of technologies in the workplace and home and to provide new training methods that enhance performance expand capabilities and optimize the fit between people and technology Research in the area of neuroergonomics has blossomed in recent years with the emergence of noninvasive techniques for monitoring human brain function that can be used to study various aspects of human behavior in relation to technology and work including mental workload visual attention working memory motor control human automation interaction and adaptive automation This volume will provide the first systematic overview of this emerging area describing the theoretical background basic research major methods as well as the new and future areas of application This collection will benefit a number of readers the experienced researcher investigating related questions in human factors and cognitive neuroscience the student wishing to get a rapid but systematic overview of the field and the designer interested in novel approaches and new ideas for application Researchers in human factors and ergonomics neuroscience cognitive psychology medicine industrial engineering and computer science will find this volume most helpful Coordination, Organizations, Institutions, and Norms in Multi-Agent Systems Olivier Boissier, Julian Padget, Virginia Dignum, Gabriela Lindemann, Eric T Matson, Sascha Ossowski, Jaime Sichman, Javier Vázquez-Salceda, 2006-06-26 This book constitutes the refereed post proceedings of the International Workshop on Agents Norms and Institutions for Regulated Multiagent Systems ANIREM 2005 and the International Workshop on Organizations in Multi Agent Systems OOOOP 2005 held in Utrecht The Netherlands July 2005 This is the first volume in a new series on issues in Coordination Organizations Institutions and Norms COIN in multi agent systems Topics include modeling analyzing and programming organizations and more
