Technology And Competitiveness In Mexico An Industrial Perspective:

Technology and Competitiveness in Mexico Thomas J. Botzman, 1999-05-13 Technology and Competitiveness in Mexico examines Mexico's efforts to transform from Third World to First World economic status as international trade agreements are signed and many closed economies open. Thomas J. Botzman explores this process by consolidating scholarly literature on Mexican technological development including that published since the foreign reserve crisis and the subsequent devaluation of the peso in 1994. He discusses the technology transfer practices and industrial transformation as routes to international competitiveness in the manufacturing sector, an accepted key to economic growth and development while highlighting the strengths and weaknesses of industrial development in Mexico. Botzman seeks to provide a benchmark for the study of modern technology development and competitiveness of Mexican industry through a greater understanding of the cooperative linkages that need to be formed between academia, government and private industry using case studies of the automobile, textile, chemical and steel industries.

OECD Reviews of Regional Innovation: 15 Mexican States 2009 OECD, 2009-06-16 This report reviews how both national and state policies in Mexico can better support regional innovation systems and includes profiles of 15 states.

The ^A Politics of Innovation Mark Zachary Taylor, 2016-05-04 Why are some countries better than others at science and technology? Written in accessible language, The Politics of Innovation provides readers from all backgrounds with a useful survey of the innovation debate. It presents extensive evidence to show that national institutions and policies do not determine innovation rates but politics do.

Perspectives on the Role of Science & Technology in Sustainable Development DIANE Publishing Company, 1995-08 Examines an array of sustainable development definitions, discusses their common elements, describes current agriculture, energy, industry technologies. Also discusses the progress that is being made in education, communication, information technologies that could support sustainable development. Numerous photos, tables.

The Fourth Industrial Revolution Dong-sung Cho, Hwiy-chang Moon, 2024-05-17 In the existing reports on national competitiveness and rankings such as IMD World Competitiveness Yearbook and WEF Global Competitiveness Report, there are sizable discrepancies in the ranking order for the same countries. As a result, the reader is often confused because such an outcome creates difficulties for government officials when translating these findings into real-world policies. These discrepancies are actually due to the differences in logic and analytical models used by IMD and WEF. Therefore, in recognizing the problems and limitations of these models, this book presents the IPS model as a new approach. As an extension of Michael Porter's diamond model, it demonstrates a robust set of methodologies as well as offers a number of key policy implications for countries around the world that wish to enhance their national competitiveness. The analytical tools used in this book can be further utilized for other units of analysis such as industries and firms. As this book provides a series of sophisticated methodologies and specific guidelines for enhancing national competitiveness both academics and practitioners can derive useful implications from this research. Alongside the theoretical frameworks and methodologies for national competitiveness presented in this book, the special theme and focus of this third volume is the fourth industrial revolution and the emerging technologies that are relevant to corporate and national competitiveness. The discussion on the digitalization of business began as early as the 1990s but emerging technologies such as big data, artificial intelligence, and cloud computing have only been a recent trend. Furthermore, the COVID-19 pandemic has accelerated the adoption of emerging technologies by both firms and countries. Yet despite the growing importance of emerging technologies, firms and governments seem to be lagging in effectively integrating them into their operations. To address these challenges, this book explains how emerging technologies have affected firms, industries, and countries. It also welcomes discussion on how firms and countries are responding to the changing environment to enhance their competitiveness through these new technologies.

New Mexico Historical Review Lansing Bartlett Bloom, Paul A. F. Walter, 2001 U.S.-Mexican Industrial Integration Sidney Weintraub, 2019-09-18. decades In most industrialized countries paper based communications are in serious decline while the demand for parcel delivery services is rising steadily with the continuing development of e commerce just in time production techniques and global supply chains For the postal sector as a whole the centre of gravity has shifted dramatically from letters and documents to parcels The authors explain how the organizational paradigm has inexorably shifted from that of a national government owned postal administration providing the basic delivery services required by society to a system of interdependent local and regional undertakings that both compete and cooperate with one another The book argues that there are no indications that the postal sector has stopped changing and that it seems most probable that the European Union s postal sector will look quite different in 2035 than it does today In closing the book explains how the shareholders of postal services companies have recently confirmed that the time has come to rethink the strategy of creating and maintaining competitiveness in the postal services industry
