Manufacturing, Technology, and Economic Growth Carlos Sabillon, 2019-07-25 This book analyzes the development of economic events in Japan China the NICs Russia Germany Britain and the United States of America during the second half of the twentieth century in an effort to uncover the variables that were determinant for the generation of economic growth After analyzing numerous economic and non economic variables the author manages to identify a common denominator that was always present when there was growth and absent when there was stagnation A strong causality linkage is established between this common denominator and growth The book also demonstrates how this common set of variables can be easily manipulated by government policy in order to deliver fast and sustained economic growth The book concludes with a clear set of macroeconomic policies for the attainment of fast non inflationary growth in developing countries middle income nations transition economies and developed countries Despite its unorthodox position the book endorses free trade privatization liberalization fiscal rectitude low inflation central bank independence proper governance protection of the environment and better income distribution With this approach the book offers a fresh new look on the problem of growth and offers hope that economic science will finally provide governments with an effective policy tool for the elimination of poverty and unemployment

Tisdell,2012-12-06 I was asked recently to prepare an independent background report on the subject of priority assessment in science and technology policy for the Australian Science and Technology Council The Council while not necessarily endorsing this book suggested that a wider audience could be interested in the type of material contained in my report and kindly gave me permission to publish the material in my own right The present book contains this and other material some of which was presented at a seminar on National Science Policy Implications for Government Departments arranged by the Department of Science and the Environment Additional ideas were developed in response to comments on the manuscript by referees as a result of discussions with Professor John Metcalfe and Dr Peter Stubbs of Manchester University a conversation with Dr Keith Hartley of the University of York and in the wake of a communication from Dr Ken Tucker Assistant Director Bureau of Industry Economics Australia Science and technology policy affects and concerns everyone of us if for no other reason than we cannot escape in this interdependent world from the economic social and environmental overs pills generated by science and technology We must face the problems and promises inherent in new and existing science and technology whether we like it or not Not surprisingly this book finds that all industrialized countries seem to be facing similar economic and social problems
