Technology And Developing Countries:

Choice and Adaptation of Technology in Developing Countries, 1972 The Role of Science and Technology in Developing Countries Graham Jones, 1971 The object of this book is to explore the ways by which modern science and technology can help to promote economic and social growth in the poor but developing countries Introduction

Technology and Developing Countries Richard Heeks, 2020-04-28 The relationship between technology and development is explored by economists policy analysts and other experts The adoption of technology is studied in five main areas agriculture energy infrastructure the introduction of technology and the success and constraints of technological diffusion as a whole This volume also examines the technology transfer between North and South from a perspective of training environmental impact and aid dependency The emphasis is not placed simply on finding problems but ways forward are examined By bringing together both practical and intellectual analysis this collection signposts future directions in the technologydevelopment relationship

Foreign Technology Imports and Economic Growth in Developing Countries Heng-Fu Zou, 1999 January 1995 A developing country s economic growth rate increases as foreign technology imports increase In developing countries increases in productivity depend not on innovation but on importing foreign plants and equipment and on borrowing foreign technology Zhang and Zou investigate the relationship between foreign technology imports and economic growth in developing countries They develop an intertemporal endogenous growth model that explicitly accepts foreign technology imports as a factor of production The model establishes a link between the growth rate of productivity in a developing country and the country s intensity of learning to use foreign technologies They hypothesize that a developing country s economic growth rate increases as foreign technology imports increase They run regressions with data for about 50 developing countries using different econometric methods and time spans These empirical tests confirm the hypothesis that foreign technology transfers boost income growth rates Moreover economic developing in developing countries differs from that in industrial countries In developing countries increases in productivity depend not on innovation but on importing foreign plants and equipment and on borrowing foreign technology This paper a product of the Public Economics Division Policy Research Department is part of a larger effort in the department to understand economic growth and foreign trade Heng fu Zou may be contacted at hzhou@worldbank.org

Technology Transfer in the Developing Countries Manas Chatterji, 1990-02-19 The objective of this book is to present the problems and possibilities of transferring technology from the developed countries to the developing countries It presents the conceptual issues legal ramifications empirical testing of mathematical models and case studies of different industries

Transfer of Technology to Developing Countries Kamal Saggi, Bernard M. Hoekman, 2004 Hoekman Maskus and Saggi analyze national and international policy options to encourage the international transfer of technology distinguishing between four major channels of such transfer trade in products trade in knowledge foreign direct investment and intra national and international movement of people They develop a typology of country types and appropriate policy rules of thumb as a guide to both national policymakers and rule making in the World Trade Organization as policies should differentiate between countries The authors also develop some rules of thumb for policy intervention These include Liberal trade policies for all types of countries Temporary encouragement of foreign direct investment inflows for low income countries Licensing for technical transformation and adaptive investments by local firms to apply technologies Policy options for source economies to encourage international transfer of technology to poor countries including fiscal incentives improvement of flows of public domain technologies with appropriate subsidies and price differentiation for exports of intellectual property products This paper a product of the Trade Team Development Research Group is part of a larger effort in the group to analyze issues related to the design of special and differential treatment of developing countries in the WTO Choice and Adaptation of Technology in Developing Countries Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development. Development Centre, 1974

Technology and Developing Countries, 1994 An Overview of Science and Technology in Developing Countries Tariq Mahmood, 2017-11-10 Research Paper postgraduate from the year 2017 in the subject History Asia language English abstract It is historical fact that all development and cultural development of societies is due to science and innovations The fact is that with inventions of science man's life has become easier and more comfortable But with this easiness and comforts negative use of Science has created problems for human beings also Anyhow Science has given prediction power to human beings about diseases and seasons also Similarly due to science and technology every one can know about the other who is thousands miles away sitting from this one And now emails are sent with in the click of the button on the computer which is attached with internet Therefore now emails have taken place instead of mails and e books are being used instead of books This hardness to softness has changed man because now man can have thousands books in their flash With these advantages now money can be easily sent within few seconds With uncountable innovations of science and technology there are some problems also arose because of misuse or negligence of side effects of modern technology In short it may be stated that all developments of science and technology may be sustained and all negative impacts may be removed through proper use of scientific knowledge and modern technology Choice and Adaptation of Technology in Developing Countries, 1974

Technology Development in Developing Countries Hyöng-söp Ch'oe, 1986 Study of technological change and conditions for technology development in developing countries esp In Korea R describes research centres for industrial research and the formation of the Daeduk urban area for scientific research studies technological change in private sector import policy and technology transfer engineering services promotion natural resources and resources development choice of technology for agriculture and rural development and the role of technology in industrialization Graphs organigram references tables

Technology and Developing Economies Zeinab Karake-Shalhoub, 1990-05-21 This is the first empirical study to compare and contrast the effects of technology transfer to developing countries from the West and from Eastern European countries

The author's primary purpose is to compare the effects of the different technologies offered by the two groups: the capital intensive technologies of the West and the labor intensive technologies of the Eastern bloc on the economic growth of developing countries as measured by growth in output. Using an analytical method based on the production input structure, the author is able to quantify the impact on economic growth of technology transfer from different sources and with different characteristics. Karake also evaluates the experience of developing countries in importing technologies and identifies the direction, pattern and content of those technologies. Scholars in international and economic development will find Karake's work an important contribution to the documented information concerning the trade in technology and its relation to economic growth and technological interdependence. Following an introductory chapter, Karake offers a general discussion of the relationships among development, growth and technology. She then introduces the econometric time series models and describes the basic study structure. The next section examines policies, mechanisms and trends in technology transfer in both the West and the East, focusing on such issues as the factors and policies which affect technology transfer to the Middle East and patterns of technological exports. A chapter devoted to model formulation, empirical analysis, estimation and results specifies the empirical models used in the study and presents statistical analysis of the appropriate data. Finally, Karake summarizes the major research findings, suggests avenues for further research and assesses the future of technology transfer activity. Four appendices containing important supplemental information and a bibliography complete the study.

Macro Policies For Appropriate Technology In Developing Countries Frances Stewart, 2019-04-23 This book explores the effects of macro policies and determines which policies have best promoted appropriate technology in developing countries. It explores the political economy of macro policies, examining which groups in society are likely to benefit from alternative policies and technologies.

The Economics Of New Technology In Developing Countries Frances Stewart, Jeffrey James, 2019-09-06 This book is the outcome of a Development Studies Association Workshop on Technology that we convened in Queen Elizabeth House in March 1980. In the 1960s and 1970s, most research on technology in poor countries was directed at the question of the labour or capital intensity of production technique, sometimes described as the neo-classical question. But recently, largely as a result of the findings of such research, the focus has changed quite radically. The collection of essays raises questions as much as it provides answers, but in so doing it provides a comprehensive introduction to the major new topics which are of substantial concern to those working on issues of technology and development.

Technology And Economic Development Samuel M Rosenblatt, 1979-06-14

The Digital Challenge Shirin Madon, S Krishna, 2018-02-06 This title was first published in 2003. Information and communication technologies (ICTs) are increasingly being recognized as vital to the economic growth and global inclusion and participation of developing countries. This book brings together both academics and practitioners to provide a comprehensive and insightful overview of ICT and development around the world. It examines the role of IT in providing new economic and industrial opportunities in increasing access to global information and communication in assisting small cultural and ethnic groups to overcome disadvantages of physical distance and in catalysing initiatives towards democratic decentralization and empowerment of citizens It also critically appraises major problems such as inappropriate focus and resource allocation and of missed opportunities By combining comparative case studies from Africa South and East Asia South America and Eastern Europe with theoretical analysis this volume synthesizes a range of issues related to the evident tensions that exist for developing countries as they try to balance global and local priorities through the adoption and use of ICTs

Planning and Popularizing Science and Technology in Developing Countries

M. Anandakrishnan,1985 Technology, Learning, and Innovation Linsu Kim,Richard R. Nelson,2000-07-24 In this volume published in 2000 leading scholars analyze in a series of essays and commentaries how newly industrializing countries NICs particularly those in East Asia have transformed themselves from technologically backward and poor to relatively modern and affluent economies over the past thirty years The contributors provide interesting theoretical perspectives and offer insights into the process of technological progress at both the macro and micro levels in these countries The essays review how firms particularly those in electronics and automobiles have dynamically accumulated technological capabilities at the micro level how public policies have shaped the process of technological progress at the national level and what problems some of these countries face today at both levels In addition the volume provides a comparison of East Asian NIC s with their Latin American counterparts The discussion also offers useful lessons for policies in other developing countries

Science and Technology in Development Planning Victor L. Urquidi,2013-10-22 Science and Technology in Development Planning Science Technology and Global Problems covers the proceedings of the Symposium on Science and Technology Development Planning The book presents several papers that tackle one of the agendas of the symposium intended to convey to the reader the main lines of thought brought to the symposium and to illustrate various approaches The 17 chapters of the text are organized into five parts according to what agenda they cover The first part tackles the interaction between science and technology and long range development goals and strategies while the second part deals with the science and technology in sectoral planning Part III covers the incorporation of science and technology in the techniques of development planning Part IV discusses the planning of science and technology in the development process The last part talks about international cooperation The book will be of great interest to readers cornered with the progress of science and how it will influence the world

Technology Transfer in the Developing Countries Manas Chatterji,2016-07-27 The objective of this book is to present the problems and possibilities of transferring technology from the developed countries to the developing countries to raise their standard of living It develops the conceptual issues legal ramifications empirical testing of mathematical models and case studies of different industries in many countries It contains articles by distinguished scholars in the field practitioners and government officials It is an important supplement to the hands on approach used by many private industries and national and international organizations The unique feature of this book is that it is multidisciplinary and that it has a balanced combination of abstract theoretical approaches and practical considerations
