Technology Learning And Innovation Experiences Of Newly Industrializing Economies:

Technology, Learning, and Innovation Linsu Kim, Richard R. Nelson, 2000-07-24 In this volume published in 2000 leading scholars analyze in a series of essays and commentaries how newly industrializing countries NICs particularly those in East Asia have transformed themselves from technologically backward and poor to relatively modern and affluent economies over the past thirty years The contributors provide interesting theoretical perspectives and offer insights into the process of technological progress at both the macro and micro levels in these countries The essays review how firms particularly those in electronics and automobiles have dynamically accumulated technological capabilities at the micro level how public policies have shaped the process of technological progress at the national level and what problems some of these countries face today at both levels In addition the volume provides a comparison of East Asian NIC s with their Latin American counterparts The discussion also offers useful lessons for policies in other developing countries The Challenges of Technology and Economic Catch-up in Emerging Economies Jeong-Dong Lee, Keun Lee, Dirk Meissner, Slavo Radošević, Nicholas Vonortas, 2021-06-24 This is an open access title available under the terms of a CC BY NC ND 4.0 International licence It is free to read at Oxford Scholarship Online and offered as a free PDF download from OUP and selected open access locations Innovation is a pivotal driving force behind economic growth Technological capability deepens and diversifies industrial activity which fundamentally enhances growth potential Consequently failure to build effective technological capability can lead to slow long term economic growth This book synthesizes and interprets existing knowledge on technology upgrading failures in order to better understand the challenges of technology upgrading in emerging economies The objective is to bring together diverse evidence on three major dimensions of technology upgrading paths of technology upgrading structural changes in the nature of technology upgrading and the issues of technology transfer and technology upgrading Knowledge on these three dimensions is synthesized at the firm sector and macro levels across different countries and world macroregions Compared to the challenges and uncertainties facing emerging economies our understanding of technology upgrading is sparse unsystematic and scattered The recent growth slowdown in many emerging economies often known as the middle income trap has reinforced the importance of understanding the technology upgrading challenges they experience While our understanding of these issues from the 1980s and 1990s is relatively more systematised the more recent changes that took place during the globalization and proliferation of global value chains and the effects of the 2008 financial crisis have not been explored and compared synthetically The current effects of COVID 19 geopolitical struggles and the growing concern around environmental sustainability add significant complexity to an already problematic situation The time is ripe to take stock of our existing knowledge on processes of technology upgrading in emerging economies and make further inroads in research on this crucial issue Global Production Networking and Technological Change in East Asia Shahid Yusuf, M. Anjum Altaf, Kaoru Nabeshima, 2004-07-01 In the coming decades East

Asian economies must face the challenges of an increasingly globalized marketplace This book explores the changing parameters of competition in East Asia and argues that success ultimately will depend on the ability of the region's firms to harness the potential of global production networks and to build their own innovative capability Presenting the latest findings on global production networks and the evolution of technological capabilities it provides researchers students and policymakers with in depth information and analysis on key issues related to growth and development in East Asia East Asian firms must not only achieve greater efficiency but also become more innovative offering differentiated products in order to vie with other first tier suppliers of multinational corporations These firms will also need to develop a technological edge if they are to compete with corporations from the leading OECD countries and form their own global production networks

Global Production Networking and Technological Change in East Asia argues that a development strategy linked to technological advance will be necessary to foster the growth of innovative national firms that can remain competitive in global markets

Advancing Development G. Mavrotas, A. Shorrocks, 2007-01-05 This book reflects on current thinking in development economics and on what may happen over the next two decades As well as studying development economics in retrospect the volume explores the current debates and challenges and looks forward at the problems that affect the global capacity to achieve the Millennium Development Goals

Strategic Coupling Henry Wai-chung Yeung, 2016-04-22 In Strategic Coupling Henry Wai chung Yeung examines economic development and state firm relations in East Asia focusing in particular on South Korea Taiwan and Singapore As a result of the massive changes of the last twenty five years new explanations must be found for the economic success and industrial transformation in the region State assisted startups and incubator firms in East Asia have become major players in the manufacture of products with a global reach Taiwan's Hon Hai Precision has assembled more than 500 million iPhones for instance and South Korea's Samsung provides the iPhone's semiconductor chips and retina displays Drawing on extensive interviews with top executives and senior government officials Yeung argues that since the late 1980s many East Asian firms have outgrown their home states and are no longer dependent on state support as a result the developmental state has lost much of its capacity to steer and direct industrialization We cannot read the performance of national firms as a direct outcome of state action Yeung calls for a thorough renovation of the still dominant view that states are the primary engine of industrial transformation He stresses action by national firms and traces various global production networks to incorporate both firm specific activities and the international political economy He identifies two sets of dynamics in these national global articulations known as strategic coupling coevolution in the confluence of state firm and global production networks and the various strategies pursued by East Asian firms to attain competitive positions in the global marketplace

Small Country Innovation Systems Charles Edquist, Leif Hommen, 2009-01-01 What are the challenges that small countries face concerning innovation and what are the effects of globalization on their innovation systems In this very interesting rich and timely book Edquist and Hommen compare ten different small national innovation systems from the Asia Pacific and Northern Europe that are rather advanced in their development. The answers that the authors give are convincing and relate not only to the unique characteristics of each national system that shapes innovative activity but also to some commonalities that exist across these countries. Franco Malerba Bocconi University Italy. This major book presents case studies of ten small country national systems of innovation NSIs in Europe and Asia namely Denmark Finland Hong Kong Ireland the Netherlands Norway Singapore South Korea Sweden and Taiwan. These cases have been carefully selected as examples of success within the context of globalization and as new economies where competition is increasingly based on innovation. To facilitate comparative analysis the ten studies follow a common structure informed by an activities based approach to describing and analysing NSIs which addresses the critical issues of globalization and the consequences of innovation for economic performance. The final chapter compares fast growth and slow growth countries concentrating on issues of innovation policy. The results illustrate the usefulness of an activities based approach to studying NSIs point to distinctive national roles within an increasingly differentiated international division of labour and address the key themes of selectivity and coordination in innovation policy. This valuable book presents one of the most significant comprehensive and comparative country studies of NSIs in the last decade. It will have great import and should be widely read by every serious student and scholar of innovation studies. Innovative

China Development Research Center of the State Council, World Bank Group, 2020-01-13. After more than three decades of average annual growth close to 10 percent China's economy is transitioning to a new normal of slower but more balanced and sustainable growth. Its old drivers of growth a growing labor force the migration from rural areas to cities high levels of investments and expanding exports are waning or having less impact. China's policymakers are well aware that the country needs new drivers of growth. This report proposes a reform agenda that emphasizes productivity and innovation to help policymakers promote China's future growth and achieve their vision of a modern and innovative China. The reform agenda is based on the three D's removing Distortions to strengthen market competition and enhance the efficient allocation of resources in the economy accelerating Diffusion of advanced technologies and management practices in China's economy taking advantage of the large remaining potential for catch up growth and fostering Discovery and nurturing China's competitive and innovative capacity as China approaches OECD incomes in the decades ahead and extends the global innovation and technology frontier. Economic Development, Education and Transnational Corporations Mark Hanson, 2007-08-09 This book focuses on the questions of why do some economically disadvantaged nations develop significantly faster than others and what roles do their educational systems play In the early 1960s Mexico and South Korea were both equally underdeveloped agrarian societies Since that time the development strategies pursued by each country resulted

Making Choices about Hydrogen Lynn Krieger Mytelka, Grant Boyle, 2008 Since the mid 1990s the emergence of a hydrogen economy and the speed with which it will arrive have been vigorously debated As a disruptive technology dominant designs for the production storage and distribution of hydrogen have not yet been established Neither have performance characteristics been achieved to compete with the existing combustion engine though the efficiency and durability of hydrogen fuel cells are improving This publication highlights the uncertainties involved in making choices about hydrogen and fuel cells in planning the development policies on national energy environment and transport sector Publisher's description

Sustainability of Thailand's Competitiveness Patarapong Intarakumnerd, Yveline Lecler, 2010 Competitiveness of a country requires continuous upgrading and sometimes major transformation Thailand is at the crossroad It can no longer pursue a strategy based on low cost advantages but its capability achievements are still too low to become an advanced economy This book points out weaknesses of Thailand's national innovation system or education and suggests how the country should develop new capabilities to survive and prosper in the globalized and fiercely competitive world It will be useful to researchers and students who want to learn more about Thailand and emerging countries and also to policy makers and executives involved in economic and industrial development Co published with IRASEC Research Institute on Contemporary Southeast Asia Bangkok

Theory and Practice of the Triple Helix Model in Developing Countries Mohammed Saad, Girma Zawdie, 2011-02-25 Theory and Practice of Triple Helix Model in Developing Countries contributes to the expanding literature on triple helix innovation focusing on developing countries The book is based on practical cases and experiences from Africa Latin America and Asia Relevant experiences and best practices from developed countries are also examined The book is presented as a response to the growing awareness about the need for policy shift from the traditional technology transfer practice to a policy position that is capable of providing a sustainable basis for innovation and technological progress in developing countries The book explores the triple helix system of innovation based on the dynamics of the interactive relationships between government industry and universities in the creation dissemination and sharing of knowledge in developing countries A major point addressed by the book is the extent to which the triple helix system of relationships between university industry and government can enhance the effectiveness of universities in developing countries as agents of innovation industrialization and sustainable development

The Global Competitiveness of Regions Robert Huggins, Hiro Izushi, Daniel Prokop, Piers Thompson, 2014-06-27 The aim of this book is to consider theoretically the notion of the global competitiveness of regions as well as giving attention as to how such competitiveness may be empirically measured With this in mind the book has three specific objectives first to place the concept of regional competitiveness within the context of regional economic development theory second to present a rationale and method for quantifying the global competitiveness of regions and third to undertake the most geographically widespread analysis of regional competitiveness differences across the globe With regard to the third goal the analysis incorporates more than 500 regions across Europe North and South America Asia Pacific the Middle East and the so called BRIC economies of Brazil Russia India and China The importance of the concept of competitiveness has increased rapidly in recent years with the issues surrounding it becoming at the same time more empirically refined and theoretically complex The focus on regions reflects the growing consensus that they are the primary spatial units that compete to attract investment and it is at the regional level that knowledge is circulated and transferred resulting in agglomerations or clusters of industrial and service sector enterprises This growing acknowledgement of the region's role as a key spatial unit of organisation has led to attention turning to competitiveness at a more regional level The book explores the results of the World Competitiveness Index of Regions WCIR covering the rankings and results of the 2014 edition The WCIR provides a tool for analysing the development of a range of regional economies across the globe It enables an illustration of the changing patterns of regional competitiveness on the international stage to be generated In fundamental terms the WCIR aims to produce an integrated and overall benchmark of the knowledge capacity capability and sustainability of each region and the extent to which this knowledge is translated into economic value and transferred into the wealth of the citizens of each region Institutional Change in Southeast Asia Fredrik Sjöholm, Jose L.

Tongzon, 2005 Institutional Change in Southeast Asia examines the institutional changes taking place in and challenges facing the region since 1997. The book focuses on determinants to the adjustments and on implementations of the reforms. It also describes various differences in the reform process between countries in the region. Southeast Asia's economic development over the last decades has been impressive. Most of the region achieved consistently high growth rates accompanied by significant structural transformation and industrialization, poverty alleviation and improvements in their overall standard of living as indicated by such social indicators as greater longevity, more widespread delivery of basic education and lower infant mortality rates. However, the crisis that struck Southeast Asia in 1997 had severe economic, social and political consequences in the region. It also threw into doubt the future economic prosperity of the countries in Southeast Asia and raised intriguing questions about the quality of their institutions and their approach to economic development. Sjöholm and Tongzon argue that the economies of Southeast Asia need to reform their institutions if the previous rapid development is to continue. The institutional weaknesses have been addressed to different degrees and with different success in the affected countries. Against the backdrop of Southeast Asia's importance in the world economy, it is hardly possible to overestimate the need to understand this process of change.
