Several positive and negative lifelong behaviors are established during adolescence, including diet and exercise, sexual conduct, practices related to oral health, smoking, drinking, and the use of legal and illegal substances. The complex issues that adolescents deal with on a daily basis can turn into health problems that persist throughout adulthood. Unfortunately, the adolescents who are frequently the most disconnected from routine health care services—those who lack insurance and family support—are often those at greatest risk for multiple and chronic health problems. Therefore, those responsible for delivering health care services to adolescents must address the health conditions that require immediate attention while preparing young people to adopt practices that can help improve their future health status and prevent unhealthy behaviors.
