Telecommunications In Canada:

Telecommunications in Canada Robert E. Babe, Richard Collins, 1990-01-01 This study provides Canada's first comprehensive integrated treatment of the emergence and development of key communication sectors telegraph telephones cable TV broadcasting communication satellites and electronic publishing By focusing on real institutions actual and frequently predatory business practices and law and regulatory policies in both historical and contemporary perspectives Babe helps demystify current communication issues Stressing the flexibility of communication technologies on the one hand and the element of corporate power on the other Babe reintroduces the principle of corporate governmental responsibility for communication outcomes a principle that has been largely drowned out by the shrill cries of Information Revolution A Voice from Afar Robert J. Collins, 1977 Instant World Canada. Department of Communications. Telecommission Directing Committee, 1971 Telecommunications in Canada Canada. Communications Canada, 1992 This publication is a general non technical survey of the Canadian telecommunications carriage industry Beginning with a short history it describes the structure of the industry the services offered how and why the industry is regulated and concludes with a summary of new initiatives in telecommunications policy Telecommunications and Canada Consultative Committee on the Implications of Telecommunications for Canadian Sovereignty, 1979 Telecommunications in Canada: The impact of vertical integration on the equipment industry Canada. Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, Canada. Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada, 1981 CRTC Facts Digest on Broadcasting and Telecommunications in Canada Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission, 1984 Telecommunications Equipment, Canada, 1985 Telecommunications in Canada Robert E. Babe, 1993 Continentalizing Canadian Telecommunications Vanda Rideout, 2003 In Continentalizing Canadian Telecommunications Vanda Rideout examines active political resistance to the radical neo liberal transformation of Canadian telecommunications that has been orchestrated by the federal government big business and their powerful lobbyists over the last two decades Rideout focuses on the protection of the public interest a crucial element neglected by most recent studies and shows that although alliances have been formed between labour consumers and public interest activists significant disagreements over issues such as free trade long distance and local competition and a targeted subsidy program for very low income Canadians have meant that this united front has not been able to counter the forces of the new neo liberal telecommunication policy regime Continentalizing Canadian Telecommunications details the complex relationships between the various corporate and government interests shows how the changes they brought about have locked Canada's telecommunications system into the orbit of the US system and discusses the implications this has for Canadians Telecom Nation Laurence B. Mussio, 2001-04-27 Laurence Mussio examines how federal and provincial public policy tried to keep pace with the diffusion of telecommunications consumer demand and a rising tide of technological innovation Telecommunications regulation struggled to maintain a balance between producer and consumer in an increasingly complex field and policy makers were compelled to defend the national interest in international telecommunications arrangements or by making far reaching decisions about transcontinental microwave systems and satellites By the late 1960s national policy makers had embraced the arrival of the computer especially once it began to be wired into Canada's communications infrastructure Telecom Nation explores the impact of the computer on government policy and the first attempts to build a national computer utility the beginnings of the Internet twenty five years before it became a reality Based primarily on the rich and largely untapped sources at the National Archives of Canada Cabinet records provincial archives and private sector repositories Telecom Nation provides an essential background to contemporary public policy issues by examining how governments reconciled technological change private enterprise consumer demand and the public good in communications It will be required reading for students and specialists interested in telecommunications public policy and technological change

Continentalizing Canadian Telecommunications Vanda Rideout, 2003 In Continentalizing Canadian Telecommunications Vanda Rideout examines active political resistance to the radical neo liberal transformation of Canadian telecommunications that has been orchestrated by the federal government big business and their powerful lobbyists over the last two decades

Invisible Empire Jean-Guy Rens, 2001-07-10 It is impossible to understand Canada without looking at the history and development of its telecommunications industry In the nineteenth century Canada was the only country in the world constructed on the basis of technology first the railway and in its shadow telegraphy In the 1930s this technological nationalism came of age and telecommunications became Canada's national technology The Invisible Empire provides the first overview of Canadian telecommunications from the laying of the first telegraph line between Toronto and Hamilton in 1846 to the separation between Nortel then known as Northern Electric and the American Bell System in 1956 Rens shows us that Louis Riel was beaten as much by telegraphy as by the Canadian army and how Bell Canada then known as Bell Telephone escaped nationalization by Sir Wilfrid Laurier's government He follows the construction of the first trans Canadian telephone line in the midst of the Great Depression of the 1930s and explains why in the context of the Cold War Canada built an electronic Great Wall of China in the far North Rens examines the context that allowed the telecommunications industry to take hold so successfully in Canada and explores how the industry grew so quickly and managed to escape American domination He situates Canadian accomplishments in telecommunications by comparing them with those of other countries

Telecommunications in Canada Steven Globerman, Deborah Carter, Fraser Institute (Vancouver, B.C.), 1988 From the back cover The telecommunications industry in several important and dramatic ways does not fit the stereotype of a service industry In particular it is a relatively capital intensive industry that has enjoyed well above average rates of productivity growth Technological changes affecting the industry in recent years have been marked and have spawned new communications activities such as cellular radio The employment growth generated in the industry has been associated with an increase in average educational levels rather than a significant deskilling that numerous observers of the service sector worry about The prospects are for continued performance along these lines However continued government restrictions on competition in the industry could thwart the realization of many of the benefits of productivity and technological change on both the supply and demand sides of the market

Deregulating Telecommunications Kevin G. Wilson, 2000 This volume critically examines the transition from monopoly to competition in the U S and Canadian telecommunications industries it looks at the history of the telephone industry its regulation and over a century of related public policy
