Abstract: Since its origins in the Fifties, Rai has always paid attention to pedagogical aspects of its offer, consistent with its Catholic inspiration, combining different genres and divulgation approaches. In the first years of its history, Italian public television represented a “second school” for different targets, producing iconic titles in learning and training. A particular branch of educational approach to television content has often been represented by the direct involvement of school groups within the programs, in the logic of game and soft competition oriented to the transmission of knowledge. During the Covid-19 pandemic, with the closure of schools and the deployment of distance teaching, Rai recovered its pivotal role in learning practices through TV programs; in a period marked by an increase of television and audiovisual consumption, Italian public service broadcasting played a distinctive role in diversifying learning opportunities of Italian students and adults.

1 The Concept of Education in Television Studies

In the field of television studies, the concept of ‘education’ has been widely and variously treated. Since the origins of the medium, this relationship has been investigated and analysed, revealing the urgency, especially on the part of the scholastic and educational communities, to address the emerging language of television.<sup>2</sup> This is a necessity of a pedagogical nature, a perspective that primarily considers television to be an educational tool and learning resource for use alongside other more traditional agencies of socialization.<sup>3</sup> In fact, as observed by Raymond Williams, “television has not attempted to exhaust the teaching process, but has been offered as an aid, in planned relation to other kinds of material.”<sup>4</sup>

The Amateur Hour Jonathan Zimmerman, 2020-10-27 The first full length history of college teaching in the United States from the nineteenth century to the present this book sheds new light on the ongoing tension between the modern scholarly ideal scientific objective and dispassionate and the inevitably subjective nature of day to day instruction American college teaching is in crisis or so we are told But we ve heard that complaint for the past 150 years as critics have denounced the poor quality of instruction in undergraduate classrooms Students daydream in gigantic lecture halls while a professor drones on or they meet with a teaching assistant for an hour of aimless discussion The modern university does not reward teaching so faculty members at every level neglect it in favor of research and publication In the first book length history of American college teaching Jonathan Zimmerman confirms but also contradicts these perennial complaints Drawing upon a wide range of previously unexamined sources The Amateur Hour shows how generations of undergraduates indicted the weak instruction they received But Zimmerman also chronicles institutional efforts to improve it especially by making teaching more personal As higher education grew into a gigantic industry he writes American colleges and universities introduced small group activities and other reforms designed to counter the anonymity of mass instruction They also experimented with new technologies like television and computers which promised to personalize teaching by tailoring it to the individual interests and abilities of each student But Zimmerman reveals the emphasis on the personal inhibited the professionalization of college teaching which remains ultimately an amateur enterprise The more that Americans treated teaching as a highly personal endeavor dependent on the idiosyncrasies of the instructor the less they could develop shared standards for it Nor have they rigorously documented college instruction a highly public activity which has taken place mostly in private Pushing open the classroom door The Amateur Hour illuminates American college teaching and frames a fresh case for restoring intimate learning communities especially for America s least privileged students Anyone who wants to change college teaching will have to start here      Report of the Committee on Educational Television Wisconsin.
