Selective Exposure To Communication Dolf Zillmann, Jennings

Bryant,2013-07-04 First published in 1985 Research into what is usually referred to as mass communication has concentrated on the societal impact of the media The ways in which these media influence people and affect their behavior have been at issue For the most part undesirable effects were pondered and documented Only a few desirable effects received similar attention and scrutiny The research preoccupation with impact has been so pronounced that comparatively speaking next to no attention has been paid to questions such as why people enjoy whatever they elect to watch or hear and more fundamentally why they elect to watch or hear in the first place whatever it is that they elect to watch or hear Without a symposium on research into selective exposure to informative and entertaining messages nor a publication that brought together the recent research in this area this volume was put together in an effort to end this dilemma and to put selective exposure research on the map as a significant research venture The Psychology of Television John Condry,2017-10-03

This volume addresses the content of television both programs and advertisements and the psychological effects of the content on the audience The author not only reports new research but explains its practical applications without jargon Issues are discussed and described in terms of psychological mechanisms and causal routes of influence While primarily referring to the American television industry and American governmental regulations the psychological principles discussed are applicable to television viewers world wide Handbook of Crime Correlates Lee Ellis,David P.
