

FILM SCRIPT

This is an example of a film script. What you are reading now is known as "action description" which describes what is going on in the scene visually.

This stretches across the width of the page, unlike dialogue. Action description should be broken into small bits, 3-5 lines in length.

Keep things like "close-up" and "long shot" out of the script. The script is about the story and the story alone! The director and his crew will decide how the story will be told in the most visually effective manner.

CHARACTER

My name is Character, and I am speaking dialogue!

NEW CHARACTER

(angry)

I'm speaking dialogue, too, and I'm angry! Directions like the one above should be kept to a minimum. These parentheticals can be used to signify emotion (angry), for clarification (to Jennifer), or to describe short actions that would not necessitate an entire action description (fidgeting).

Here's some more action! The Inciting Incident (a.k.a. the "Major Dramatic Question") should be established early.

The Inciting Incident is why you're writing the script; it's what the film is trying to resolve ("Will Dorothy get home?" in The Wizard of Oz, for example).

The Starving Artist Myth Mark J. Jones, 2024-08-20 Creative sector jobs are driving our economy and offer a viable career path for today s youth Careers and business opportunities in creative industries offer flexibility variety and security Why then do people hesitate to go into them A belief in the myth of the starving artist which conjures images of penniless writers and artistic bohemians is to blame The myth leads many away from choosing a path they would love in favour of more traditional fields Years later they may come to regret that choice Mark J Jones shows that the persistent stereotype of the starving artist is not just costing youth and working aged people the opportunity to explore satisfying careers it could also cost Canada s economy in lost opportunities Through education and entrepreneurial strategy artists musicians writers media makers designers actors and others can come to understand how to reach audiences and customers in a global market In The Starving Artist Myth Jones erases any remaining doubt about the opportunities in the creative economy by getting at the origin of the starving artist stereotype demonstrating the economic resiliency of the sector and delving into the strategies for achieving career success

Making Crime Television Anita Lam, 2013-10-15 This book employs actor network theory in order to examine how representations of crime are produced for contemporary prime time television dramas As a unique examination of the production of contemporary crime television dramas particularly their writing process Making Crime Television Producing Entertaining Representations of Crime for Television Broadcast examines not only the semiotic relations between ideas about crime but the material conditions under which those meanings are formulated Using ethnographic and interview data Anita Lam considers how textual representations of crime are assembled by various people including writers directors technical consultants and network executives technologies screenwriting software and whiteboards and texts newspaper articles and rival crime dramas The emerging analysis does not project but instead concretely examines what and how television writers and producers know about crime law and policing An adequate understanding of the representation of crime it is maintained cannot be limited to a content analysis that treats the representation as a final product Rather a television representation of crime must be seen as the result of a particular assemblage of logics people creative ideas commercial interests legal requirements and broadcasting networks A fascinating investigation into the relationship between television production crime and the law this book is an accessible and well researched resource for students and scholars of Law Media and Criminology
