John Steinbeck in Films, 1975

Aaron Copland's Hollywood Film Scores Paula Musegades, 2020 A pioneering study of how American composer Aaron Copland helped shape the sound of the Hollywood film industry and introduced the moviegoing public to modern musical styles One of the most influential and beloved American composers Aaron Copland played a critical role in shaping what is often recognized as the American sound He is best known for achieving this through his works for the concert hall and ballet Yet his film scores though less familiar nowadays were equally influential Between 1939 and 1949 Copland composed the music for five major Hollywood films Lewis Milestone's Of Mice and Men 1939 Sam Wood's Our Town 1940 Lewis Milestone's The North Star 1943 and The Red Pony 1949 and William Wyler's The Heiress 1949 These were high prestige projects based on literary works by such respected figures as Henry James Lillian Hellman and John Steinbeck Using the film medium to introduce the moviegoing public to modern musical styles Copland challenged Hollywood's traditional uses of music in film His innovative approaches enhanced important national themes running through these films while also contributing to Hollywood's transformation as the Great Depression gave way to wartime tribulation and eventually postwar prosperity and Red Scare paranoia Aaron Copland's Hollywood Film Scores explores Copland's scores interviews and lectures tracing his legacy and lasting influence on Hollywood's sound's of music in film His innovative approaches enhanced important national themes running through these films while also contributing to Hollywood's transformation as the Great Depression gave way to wartime tribulation and eventually postwar prosperity and Red Scare paranoia Aaron Copland's Hollywood Film Scores explores Copland's scores interviews and lectures tracing his Aaron Copland's Hollywood Film Scores explores Copland's scores, interviews, and lectures tracing his legacy and lasting influence on Hollywood's sound. John Steinbeck in films Gary C. Davis, 1981. The Development Film in the Americas Molly Geidel, 2025-10-28. In this book Molly Geidel traces the rise and fall of the development film, an overlooked film genre that circulated widely in the Americas from the 1940s through the 1970s. Development films, often short documentaries, were made at the behest of state agencies, global governance organizations, and private corporations to link capitalist conceptions of economic growth to improved quality of life. Development films made this link beautifully compelling, blending elements from ethnography and socially committed leftist film traditions to create indelible narratives of underdevelopment and modernization. The Development Film in the Americas tells the story of these films and the hemispheric cohort of filmmakers who crafted them, chronicling the filmmakers' fraught relationships with both the organizations they worked for and the actors in their films. Film Study Frank Manchel, 1990. The four volumes of Film Study include a fresh approach to each of the basic categories in the original edition. Volume one examines the film as film; volume two focuses on the thematic approach to film; volume three draws on the history of film; and volume four contains extensive appendices listing film distributors, sources, and historical information, as well as an index of authors, titles, and film personalities. Badmen, Bandits, and Folk Heroes Juan J. Alonzo, 2009. Badmen, Bandits, and Folk Heroes is a comparative study of the literary and cinematic representation of Mexican American masculine identity from early twentieth-century adventure stories and movie Westerns through contemporary self-representations by Chicano writers and filmmakers. In this deeply compelling book, Juan J. Alonzo proposes a reconsideration of the early stereotypical depictions of Mexicans in fiction and film, rather than viewing stereotypes as unrelentingly negative. Alonzo presents them as part of a complex apparatus of identification and disavowal. Furthermore, Alonzo reassesses Chicano self-representation in literature and film and argues that the Chicano expression of identity is characterized less by essentialism than by an acknowledgement of the contingent status of present-day identity formations. Alonzo opens his provocative study with a fresh look at the adventure stories of Stephen Crane and the silent Western movies of D. W. Griffith. He also investigates the conflation of the greaser, the bandit, and the Mexican revolutionary into one villainous figure in early Western movies and more broadly traces the development of the badman in Westerns. He newly interrogates the writings of Américo Paredes regarding the makeup of Mexican masculinity and productively trains his analytic eye on the recent films of Jim Mendiola and the contemporary poetry of Evangelina Vigil. Throughout Badmen, Bandits, and Folk Heroes, Alonzo convincingly demonstrates how fiction and films that formerly appeared one-dimensional in their treatment of Mexicans and Mexican Americans actually offer surprisingly multifarious and ambivalent representations. At the same time, his valuation of indeterminacy contingency and hybridity in contemporary cultural production creates new possibilities for understanding identity formation

The Disaster Film as Social Practice Joseph Zornado, Sara Reilly, 2024-07-26

Surveying disaster films from a Lacanian psychoanalytic perspective this book explores the disaster film genre from its initial appearance in 1933 The Grapes of Wrath 1933 to its present day form Don't Look Up 2021 laying bare the ideological unconscious at work within the genre The Disaster Film as Social Practice examines environmental science history film and literature in its interdisciplinary analysis of the disaster film genre It explores the interplay and the dichotomy of restorative and reflective disaster narratives An analysis of cinema's role in symbolizing and managing collective anxiety around disaster and death narratives examines how disaster films through their narrative structures and symbolic elements contribute to the public's understanding and emotional processing of real world threats and how cinematic narratives shape and are shaped by public and private ideological discourses reflecting deeper psychological and environmental truths Finally the book offers an overview of how the transformation of the disaster film genre over time tells a history through imagining the worst Providing a nuanced understanding of the disaster film genre and its significance in contemporary culture and thought this book will be of interest to scholars and students of film studies cultural studies media studies and environmental studies

What becomes of history: the movie "The Grapes of Wrath" as epic saga of human endurance Martina Kästner, 2006-11-27

Seminar paper from the year 2006 in the subject American Studies Literature grade 1.3 University of Erfurt Anglistik course Vom Buch zum Film Steinbecks The Grapes of Wrath language English abstract In 1936 Steinbeck was commissioned by a San Francisco newspaper to write a series of articles about the migrant farmers who had lost the land they had worked on in the region of the Dust Bowl and who therefore came to California to find work and to start a new life Steinbeck travelled to the region and witnessed the hardships those farmers had to endure with his own eyes He was deeply moved by their fate and wanted to help them Interestingly he decided that instead of writing newspaper articles about them he was going to write a novel Steinbeck thus chose a fictional medium over a documentary one to inform the public about a highly topical subject His novel The Grapes of Wrath was made into a film only one year after it had been published in 1939 The movie which carried the same title was immensely successful and won the director John Ford an Oscar Award Thus Steinbeck succeeded in drawing attention to the hard lot of the migrant farmers What becomes of history is the first part of the title for my paper I take this to refer to the relationship between historical reality and its depictions in literary and cinematic works of art and not to a mere tracing of historical details in an otherwise fictional piece of art I think I am justified in doing so because that seems to be the striking particularity of the book's creation Steinbeck obviously thought the novel which is usually associated with fiction to be a better medium to convey historical reality than a classical medium of documentary nature like a news article in a newspaper The same particularity applies to the movie which is not a documentary Since success proved both Steinbeck and Ford right the interesting question is How and why can works of art convey historical reality and how is this done in the movie The Grapes of Wrath In order to answer this question I will briefly recount in the first chapter the historical events Steinbeck's book and Ford's movie are based on I will then proceed in the second chapter to give a summary of the plot of the movie that is set in the historical reality described in the first chapter Also in the second chapter there will be an analysis of the movie in terms of saga and then epic saga as well as a discussion of how its main theme human endurance is borne out

Film and Fiction Somdatta Mandal, 2005 Moving pictures in the silent era and moving pictures with recorded sounds after 1927 has been used to tell stories describe events imitate human actions expose problems and urge reforms It is not therefore surprising that such uses would provoke speculative comparisons with other major human systems for telling describing imitating exposing and urging verbal language The twenty two essays in this volume deal primarily with the interrelation of the two art forms fiction and film An entirely twentieth century phenomenon this interrelation not only developed a cinematic imagination in novelists but also added new dimensions to the modernist worldview Divided under four categories the essays discuss film and literary narrative theories analyse different Hollywood genres speak of individual associations of writers with the liveliest art of the century and also delve into the problems of adapting of individual texts
