Stelarc The Monograph:

Stelarc Julie Joy Clarke, 2005 A user's guide to Stelarc the international performance artist whose extreme performances explore the borderland between bodies and machines Machine Art in the Twentieth Century Andreas Broeckmann, 2016-12-16 An investigation of artists' engagement with technical systems tracing art historical lineages that connect works of different periods Machine art is neither a movement nor a genre but encompasses diverse ways in which artists engage with technical systems In this book Andreas Broeckmann examines a variety of twentieth and early twenty-first century artworks that articulate people's relationships with machines In the course of his investigation Broeckmann traces historical lineages that connect art of different periods looking for continuities that link works from the end of the century to developments in the 1950s and 1960s and to works by avant garde artists in the 1910s and 1920s An art historical perspective he argues might change our views of recent works that seem to be driven by new media technologies but that in fact continue a century old artistic exploration Broeckmann investigates critical aspects of machine aesthetics that characterized machine art until the 1960s and then turns to specific domains of artistic engagement with technology algorithms and machine autonomy looking in particular at the work of the Canadian artist David Rokeby vision and image and the advent of technical imaging and the human body using the work of the Australian artist Stelarc as an entry point to art that couples the machine to the body mechanically or cybernetically Finally Broeckmann argues that systems thinking and ecology have brought about a fundamental shift in the meaning of technology which has brought with it a rethinking of human subjectivity He examines a range of artworks including those by the Japanese artist Seiko Mikami whose work exemplifies the shift Performance, Identity, and the Neo-Political Subject Fintan Walsh, Matthew Causey, 2013-04-17 This book stages a timely discussion about the centrality of identity politics to theatre and performance studies It acknowledges the important close relationship between the discourses and practices historically while maintaining that theatre and performance can enlighten ways of being with others that are not limited by conventional identitarian languages The essays engage contemporary theatre and performance practices that pose challenging questions about identity as well as subjectivity relationality and the politics of aesthetics responding to neo liberal constructions and exploitations of identity by seeking to discern describe or imagine a new political subject Chapters by leading international scholars look to visual arts practice digital culture music public events experimental theatre and performance to investigate questions about representation metaphysics and politics The collection seeks to foreground shared universalist connections that unite rather than divide visiting metaphysical questions of being and becoming and the possibilities of producing alternate realities and relationalities The book asks what is at stake in thinking about a subject a time a place and a performing arts practice that would come after identity and explores how theatre and performance pose and interrogate these questions Posthuman Life David Roden, 2014-10-10 We imagine posthumans as humans made superhumanly intelligent or resilient by future

advances in nanotechnology biotechnology information technology and cognitive science Many argue that these enhanced people might live better lives others fear that tinkering with our nature will undermine our sense of our own humanity Whoever is right it is assumed that our technological successor will be an upgraded or degraded version of us Human 2 0 Posthuman Life argues that the enhancement debate projects a human face onto an empty screen We do not know what will happen and not being posthuman cannot anticipate how posthumans will assess the world If a posthuman future will not necessarily be informed by our kind of subjectivity or morality the limits of our current knowledge must inform any ethical or political assessment of that future Posthuman Life develops a critical metaphysics of posthuman succession and argues that only a truly speculative posthumanism can support an ethics that meets the challenge of the transformative potential of technology

Bioethics in the Age of New Media Joanna Zylińska, 2009-03-20 An examination of ethical challenges that technology presents to the allegedly sacrosanct idea of the human and a proposal for a new ethics of life rooted in the philosophy of alterity Bioethical dilemmas including those over genetic screening compulsory vaccination and abortion have been the subject of ongoing debates in the media among the public and in professional and academic communities But the paramount bioethical issue in an age of digital technology and new media Joanna Zylińska argues is the transformation of the very notion of life In this provocative book Zylińska examines many of the ethical challenges that technology poses to the allegedly sacrosanct idea of the human In doing so she goes beyond the traditional understanding of bioethics as a matter for moral philosophy and medicine to propose a new ethics of life rooted in the relationship between the human and the nonhuman both animals and machines that new technology prompts us to develop After a detailed discussion of the classical theoretical perspectives on bioethics Zylinska describes three cases of bioethics in action through which the concepts of the human animal and life are being redefined the reconfiguration of bodily identity by plastic surgery in a TV makeover show the reduction of the body to two dimensional genetic code and the use of biological material in such examples of bioart as Eduardo Kac s infamous fluorescent green bunny Zylinska addresses ethics from the interdisciplinary perspective of media and cultural studies drawing on the writings of thinkers from Agamben and Foucault to Haraway and Hayles Taking theoretical inspiration in particular from the philosophy of alterity as developed by Jacques Derrida Emmanuel Levinas and Bernard Stiegler Zylinska makes the case for a new nonsystemic nonhierarchical bioethics that encompasses the kinship of humans animals and machines

Cyborg Theology Scott A. Midson, 2017-10-30 In particular Donna Haraway argued in her famous 1991 Cyborg Manifesto that people since they are so often now detached and separated from nature have themselves evolved into cyborgs This striking idea has had considerable influence within critical theory cultural studies and even science fiction where it has surfaced for example in the Terminator films and in the Borg of the Star Trek franchise But it is a notion that has had much less currency in theology In his innovative new book Scott Midson boldly argues that the deeper nuances of Haraway's and the cyborg idea can similarly rejuvenate theology mythology and anthropology Challenging the damaging anthropocentrism directed towards nature and the non human in our society the author reveals through an imaginative reading of the myth of Eden how it is now possible for humanity to be at one with the natural world even as it vigorously pursues novel post human technologies The Inhabitable Flesh of Architecture Marcos Cruz, 2017-03-02 Today's architecture has failed the body with its long heritage of purity of form and aesthetic of cleanliness A resurgence of interest in flesh especially in art has led to a politics of abjection completely changing traditional aesthetics and is now giving light to an alternative discussion about the body in architecture This book is dedicated to a future vision of the body in architecture questioning the contemporary relationship between our Human Flesh and the changing Architectural Flesh Through the analysis and design of a variety of buildings and projects Flesh is proposed as a concept that extends the meaning of skin one of architecture's most fundamental metaphors It seeks to challenge a common misunderstanding of skin as a flat and thin surface In a time when a pervasive discourse about the impact of digital technologies risks turning the architectural skin ever more disembodied this book argues for a thick embodied flesh by exploring architectural interfaces that are truly inhabitable Different concepts of Flesh are investigated not only concerning the architectural and aesthetic but also the biological aspects The latter is materialised in form of Synthetic Neoplasms which are proposed as new semi living entities rather than more commonly derived from scaled up analogies between biological systems and larger scale architectural constructs These neoplastic creations are identified as partly designed object and partly living material in which the line between the natural and the artificial is progressively blurred Hybrid technologies and interdisciplinary work methodologies are thus required and lead to a revision of our current architectural practice
