warehouses for analytics processing. However, the massive growth of digital data, the punishing cost of security exposures as well as the unprecedented demand for instant actionable intelligence from data in real time have convinced them to rethink that decision and instead embrace the strategy of data gravity for analytics. At the core of data gravity is the conviction that analytics must exist and run where the data resides. An IBM client eloquently compares this change in analytics strategy to a shift from moving the ocean to the boat to moving the boat to the ocean where the boat is the analytics and the ocean is the data. IBM respects and invests heavily on data gravity because it recognizes the tremendous benefits that data gravity can deliver to you including reduced cost and minimized security risks. IBM Machine Learning for z OS is one of the offerings that decidedly move analytics to Z where your mission critical data resides. In the inherently secure Z environment, your machine learning scoring services can co-exist with your transactional applications and data supporting high throughput and minimizing response time while delivering consistent service level agreements (SLAs). This book introduces Machine Learning for z OS version 1.1.0 and describes its unique value proposition. It provides step-by-step guidance for you to get started with the program including best practices for capacity planning, installation and configuration, administration and operation. Through a retail example, the book shows how you can use the versatile and intuitive web user interface to quickly train, build, evaluate and deploy a model. Most importantly, it examines use cases across industries to illustrate how you can easily turn your massive data into valuable insights with Machine Learning for z OS.

The IFPUG Guide to IT and Software Measurement IFPUG, 2012-04-25. The widespread deployment of millions of current and emerging software applications has placed software economic studies among the most critical of any form of business analysis.
