contemporary society's dead ends: the hospitals, psychiatric wards, prisons, and military training camps so aptly described by Irving Goffman as total institutions. Carol Rosen shows how the setting in these plays tends to engulf and then to exclude the audience, turning an encompassing stage structure, a closed, controlling, absolute system into a protagonist that overwhelms the characters. In discussions ranging from Harold Pinter's The Hothouse to Samuel Beckett's Endgame, she further maintains that the impasse of characters in reductive environments supplies a unifying image for post-World War II drama in general. This state of impasse pervades contemporary drama. Everyday activities and attempts to endure life in a parenthesis are vacated of traditional social or moral meaning onstage. The pain of this kind of survival, spatially fixed, is at the heart of Endgame; for example, an extreme instance of this mode of drama at the edge of existence. In plays such as Peter Nichols's The National Health, Peter Weiss's Marat/Sade, Friedrich Dürrenmatt's The Physicists, David Storey's Home, Brendan Behan's The Quare Fellow, Jean Genet's Deathwatch, and David Rabe's The Basic Training of Pavlo Hummel, the splintered self, like the divided society, strives to endure against enormous, codified odds. Even in plays not depicting the rigidity of institutions, the contemporary dramatic mode is finally characterized by sparse, introspective action in a closed system, an onstage model of a world gone awry, a world at an impasse.
