explicitly and deliberately as both a concept and a question The approach is broadly conceptual and constitutes an exercise in theoretical and philosophical inquiry While deeply informed by North American debates and developments this book offers a distinctive counterpoint and a strategically ex centric perspective being equally informed by the curriculum scene in Australia as well as the UK and elsewhere Divided into two sections this book first addresses matters of general curriculum inquiry while the second turns more specifically to English teaching and to associated questions of language literacy and literature in L1 education Green brings the two together through a critical examination of the Australian national curriculum especially in its implications and challenges for English teaching and with due regard for the project of transnational curriculum inquiry

P facing t p The Green Middle Ages Claudine Chavannes-Mazel, Linda IJpelaar, 2025-10-01 How green were people in late antiquity and the Middle Ages Unlike today the nature around them was approached with faith trust and care The population size was many times smaller than today and human impact on nature not as extreme as it is now People did not have to worry about issues like deforestation and sustainability This book is about the knowledge of plants and where that knowledge came from How did people use earth and plants in ancient times and what did they know about their nutritional or medicinal properties From which plants one could make dyes such as indigo woad and dyer s madder Is it possible to determine that through technical research today Which plants could be found in a ninth century monastery garden and what is the symbolic significance of plants in secular and religious literature The Green Middle Ages addresses these and other issues including the earliest herbarium collections with a leading role for the palaeography and beautiful illuminations from numerous medieval manuscripts kept in Dutch and other Western libraries and museums
