

Healthy Communication- Conflict Resolution

"It's not conflict, it's just two people who have different ideas about what's best."

Choose one of these scenarios (or create your own) to use as an example in the activities below:

Scenario 1: Robert wants a new article about a local community charity to appear in the community newspaper. The newspaper's editorial board is not interested in the article. Robert is not in the community newspaper's editorial board.

Scenario 2: Maria and Emily have been friends for a long time. But Maria feels that Emily has been a friend who has not been a friend to her. Emily has been a friend who has not been a friend to her. Emily has been a friend who has not been a friend to her.

Scenario 3: Natalia can't believe that her friend would treat her in this way. In this case, with the caption "Sometimes friends are not friends."

Any comments:

What conflict or outcome does the person acting in this way have? (e.g., conflict, mutual action, choice)

What outcome or communication does the person acting in this way have?

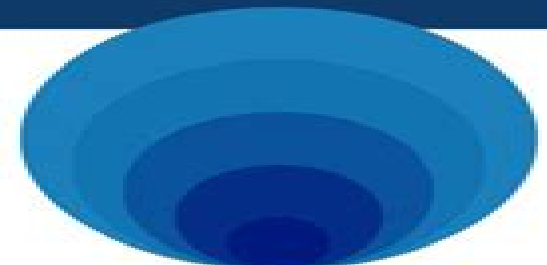

What can you learn about the situation that could improve the situation?
